APPLICATIONS FOR AGENCIES RECEIVED.

[From the New York Evening Mail, August 14.]
BEGINNING HANDSOMELY.
The success of the Industrial Exhibition Company in selling its bonds may be judged from the fact that although it is but a few weeks since the bonds were printed and ready for sale, over $100,000 in money have been turned over to the company by its financial agents, Morgenthau, Bruno & Co. This fact alone indicates the future success of the form of bonds adopted by the company—a form adopted and used by several of the European governments—national and municipal—and shown by experience to be not only attractive, but secure.

The $100,000 received by the company from its agents was last week paid to the owners of the property now occupied by Allerton, Moore & Co. for their large stockyards—on which previous payments had been made by the company. This tract of land is the only available site remaining unoccupied on the island for such a vast Exhibition building as the company proposed to erect. It extends from Ninety-eighth street to 102d and from Third to Fourth avenues—covering a thousand feet square. It is a highly sightly and easily accessible location, and can be fitted for the purpose of an Exhibition at an expense of from $500,000 to $1,000,000 less than any other equal tract of land above Fifty-ninth street.

The Directors intend to invest the money received from the sale of bonds—as it comes in—in the preparation of the grounds for the immense structure that is to cover a large part of this area, and in building—a section at a time—the structure that is to be the most conspicuous feature and ornament of the central part of the island. Of course, the bonds will be secured by every dollar's worth of permanent improvement on the land.

A Mysterious Element in Beecher's Nature.

WHO ARE THE CONSPIRATORS?

What Is the Mental State of Mrs. Tilton?

DID "THE LADY PROTEST TOO MUCH?"

Mr. Beecher Retires to His Peekskill Farm.

HIDE AND SEEK

Moulton and Elizabeth Anxiously Sought For.

PRESS COMMENTS ON THE STATEMENT.

Theodore Tilton has written a letter to Mr. F. D. Moulton asking him to produce his statement; that now is the time, and that the vindication of his own character demands it. Mr. Tilton himself remains in an atmosphere of frigid silence, and has not even a letter to produce. When the HERALD reporter made his usual call upon him yesterday afternoon Mr. Tilton seemed to have very much changed his usual bearing, and refused to answer any questions. He simply says that Mr. Moulton's turn has come to speak. He evaded a question as to whether he thought Mr. Moulton could say anything that would change the present aspect of affairs, and would not make any answer, simply saying it was Mr. Moulton's turn to speak. He feels very bitter about the manner in which he is spoken of by the press, and, if one might judge by his expression and demeanor, looks like a man who is disappointed; one who has played a game he was confident of winning and has lost. He was at home nearly all the day yesterday, but was called upon by very few.

Mr. Beecher went to Peekskill yesterday morning for his vacation, which has been so long interrupted, and will not return until October.

A HERALD reporter called at the residence of Mr. Ovington, with whom Mrs. Tilton has been sojourning, and was informed by Mrs. Ovington that Mrs. Tilton was not there, but out of town; but that for any further information he had better call upon Mr. Ovington at his place of business, which the reporter did, and found the gentleman at the place designated.

Mr. Ovington said that two or three persons had called upon him to inquire as to Mrs. Tilton's present place of sojourn.

"It is very singular for me," said Mr. Ovington, "to be placed in the position I am. It was my duty as a gentleman and as a friend to receive a wife who knocked at his door for admission." Mr. Ovington expressed his amusement at the rôle he played in the Brooklyn drama—that of knowing where this husband's wife was when the husband himself did not know it. However, he was bound to silence, and therefore could tell no one where Mrs. Tilton was at present sojourning. She was not in the humor just now to be seen by any one about this painful matter, and her motives for this would be readily understood by everybody, for Mrs. Tilton, above all, suffered deeply, and with a sensitive nature like hers the sufferings were no ordinary ones.

"What will be," asked the reporter, "Mrs. Tilton's future course as regards her husband?"

"I believe she has made up her mind concerning him, which is not to return to him, but to remain away from him, come what may. The separation she now considers accomplished."

"Do you think her resolution a wise one?" "It is a question upon which I should rather not express myself, particularly as I have never advised her in the matter. This is a question which she can only decide for herself. I am, of course, not of Mr. Tilton's way of thinking in the whole matter. From the first, Beecher has been a maligned and innocent man, in my opinion, and I am happy to say I am not alone of my opinion; but had you seen the ovation which was given him by the members at his house after the prayer meeting on Friday, it would have shown you how unanimously loving the members of the church are to their pastor. It was a sight I shall never forget."

MRS. TILTON'S MENTAL STATE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Once, and but once, during a period of forty years, I served as a juror in a criminal court, it was the Oyer and Terminer, and I was impanelled, with eleven others, to try a man who was under indictment for murder in the first degree. There was but one degree of murder at that time. Since, I understand, the law has been changed, and there are now two: at all events, murder, at the time I speak of, was punishable with death, and the case of the man charged before us took but a short time to try; the proof, on the part of the State, was clear and conclusive as to the killing, and was not substantially disputed, so that the jury were readily convinced upon this point, but, just here a difficulty arose, we could not understand why the prisoner killed the deceased, there was no motive shown; no reason for the act; it was not to rob him; the deceased was poor; it was not for revenge; the dead man had never injured or offended the prisoner so far as the evidence went; there was no fight, altercation or provocation; both parties were sober and insanity was not even suggested; the prisoner's life was involved in the verdict, and had the case been submitted to us at this stage, from the peculiar circumstances surrounding the killing and the absence of all proof of motive, we could not and would not have found that the prisoner intended to kill the deceased, and hence, as the existence of such an intent was necessary to constitute murder, the prisoner would not have been convicted capitally, but of an inferior degree of manslaughter, involving fine or imprisonment; but an agency from which the accused had no reason to apprehend danger changed the aspect of the case and sent him to an ignominious grave. His counsel, who was reputed to be an able and zealous man, anxious for the safety of his client and his own professional success, was resolute to defeat the prosecution, and called a number of witnesses for the defence. They proved that about a year before the killing, the prisoner and the deceased quarrelled over cards, and the deceased, being the larger man of the two, assaulted the prisoner upon being accused by him of lying and cheating, and threatened to repeat the chastisement if the prisoner should ever speak to him again. Upon cross-examination these witnesses stated that when beaten the prisoner declared he would not die till he got even with the deceased, and he subsequently frequently said, speaking of the deceased, that he "would fix him yet," and "would have his life." This was the only proof given by the defence. I have never been able to comprehend why it was offered at all. A reason was given at the time, but it seemed to us laymen to be bitterly absurd, and the Judge seemed to think so too. The evidence, however, served one purpose. It made clear to us the missing motive the prosecution failed to show. We understood the case now clearly. It was a cold-blooded, premeditated murder, instigated by black-hearted diabolical revenge, and we were compelled to render a verdict accordingly. The man was afterwards executed.

I was forcibly reminded of this case a few days ago on reading the testimony or statement or whatever it may be called of Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton before the committee appointed by Mr. Beecher to investigate the alleged slanders concerning himself and Plymouth church. It seemed to me as if the same legal views of the defence I have referred to were adopted with almost equal success in the present instance. Of course, I am not a lawyer, and do not understand fine drawn legal distinctions and complicated theories. I believe every criminal case must have a theory, whether consistent with the evidence or not, and I am sure that it must be very scientific and talented and all that sort of thing; but it appeared to me as if the whole object of her production and testimony was to show such a state of feeling between her husband and herself for years as would render her fall from virtue not only possible, but the most probable occurrence in the world. Harsh treatment, neglect, contempt, insult, starvation, false accusation, contumely and indignity of every conceivable kind this lady averred she endured at the hands of Theodore Tilton. She had no pride of appearance. She "knew her presence was always mean," and conscious of this defect, if it may be so called, with a woman's tact and discrimination she sought not to render attractive what she could not improve, but, turning her attention in another direction, endeavored to compensate for the imperfections of her personal appearance by cultivating her mental faculties, and herein she attained a marked success. She considered herself highly possessed, and was proportionately proud thereof. Perhaps it is not too much to say that if she was vain of anything it was of her mental endowments; and as this was a vanity, so it was a weakness. She was anxious to display her abilities and observe what recognition or appreciation the exhibition would evoke from others. Her husband, however, coldly criticised her language, slighted her efforts; she "felt inferior in his presence," and was thus cruelly wounded in her own esteem. Instead of regarding her with pride he was ashamed of her; her life was a failure, her home was unhappy. In a word she was not appreciated. She was wrapt in hopelessness and gloom; her heart was full of rebellion, bitterness and despair. In sullen sorrow, despondent and almost demented, forgetful of the Almighty mercy which left her living children to love and cherish, she sought out and wandered to the graves of little ones long since passed away, as a new incentive to her weeping and melancholy madness. She was determined to be agonized and miserable, and, with a strange confusion of ideas, which seemed to reverse their relative positions, looked upon her husband as a fitter inmate of a lunatic asylum than a mate for her. Yet she was sensible that there was another much greater than her husband—one whose fame reached throughout the land and far beyond the sea—whose judgment and opinion, whose taste and delicacy, whose position and surroundings were far superior to those of Theodore Tilton; and in the society of this one she was burdened with no humiliating sense of inferiority, and was, without offensive condescension, treated and recognized as an equal in mind, was lifted to his altitude, and was in this place, and not elsewhere, happy. This woman was nervous, sensitive and proud; emotional, romantic, educated in a strange school and constantly inhaled a fetid and enervating atmosphere. She read novels, too, and was evidently in the habit of identifying herself with the last new heroine who challenged her attention. Gifted with a keen perception in some respects, she had delicacy and refinement sufficient to comprehend, and was sensitive enough to recognize and quickly appropriate as a slight anything however small that might by possibility be so construed, although not so intended, and having once taken her affection and confidence from her husband, she was not slow to magnify into colossal proportions every trifling word and deed, however innocently meant, as a wrong and outrage offered to herself. Every indifferent word and look to her had a meaning and was pregnant with suspicion and contempt. While her letters breathing love and faith are contradicted by and utterly at war with her verbal statement, both cannot be true, and whichever is adopted necessarily falsifies the other. If the sentiments which fill her published letters were sincere her statement must as certainly be untrue; if insincere they are models of deceit and hypocrisy, and could have been written for no better purpose than to mislead her husband by inspiring him with confidence in an affection which did not exist.

It is not too much to say that this is the condition in which the testimony of Mrs. Tilton leaves the case. Do not understand me to intimate an opinion of her guilt or innocence, or that her husband is immaculate, or better or worse than she declares him to be. I leave those questions untouched and desire to consider only the judgment, propriety and effect of the course pursued in and by her examination. And for this purpose assuming her story, as told to the committee to be true. She must have been thoroughly disgusted with and must have heartily despised Theodore Tilton. No man or woman in the world will believe different if—I say if—her statement be true. Hatred may be too strong a word to use, but the feelings entertained by her for him, if they did not attain that bad dignity, must have been so nearly akin that the difference would be in shade and color only.

Now, it is universally believed that the best safeguard of a husband's honor rests in the affection of his wife. It is equally true that where affection and confidence do not exist, where estrangement, distrust and dislike prevail, nothing remains to protect him, opportunity and inclination serving. When, in addition to this, the wife frankly admits an attraction toward another man, let him be saint or sinner, it adds no new security to the safety of her own fair fame. We are often told of attachments between persons of opposite sexes of a purely platonic and spiritual character, so far above the sensual and grosser feelings of this dull, unappreciative earth that we poor waifs of humanity, frail and fallible, cursed with an inheritance of primal sin, forgetful of the world to come, and only intent to enjoy the world we live in—we, who are afflicted like Hamlet, with more faults upon our heads than we have words at our command to number them—cannot even arrogate to ourselves the supposition that we understand them. Of course such attachments are very heavenly and all that sort of thing. I do not mean to speak irreverently, but there is a prevailing opinion in all well regulated respectable communities that an indulgence in such sentiments has a bad and demoralizing tendency, and generally results in demonstrating that the name of frailty is man as well as woman—they are both frail together. We have therefore no confidence in the sanctity or divinity of such attachments, and look upon them, however innocent, especially between a married man and a married woman—neither of whom, however, is married to the other—as an imminently slippery and dangerous relationship. Nor does it help the matter any that the woman is enthusiastic to fanaticism—delirious or hysterical, I think some one calls it—on the subject of religion, is a devotee so blind and so absorbed that she sees an angel in every professor, and is so far under the influence of darkness and delusion as to believe that a human soul can be white and pure before its God while its dwelling place is foul and polluted with adultery.

Understand, I do not say Mrs. Tilton is guilty. God forbid I should judge her. I am merely discussing an abstract theory that has a connection with the case and am endeavoring to show where the lawyers have left it, whatever the facts may be.

It is all the more wonderful to me that the statement should have been made when I discover from the questions put to the lady and her answers thereto that a perfect understanding as to her story existed between the lawyer and herself. Her questions, too, were so framed and the answers so connected that it must be obvious to every person the statement had been rehearsed and her examiner had a complete knowledge in advance of what she would say. The witness was nervous, as might be naturally expected. Her position was novel and terrible. The strongest and most resolute nature could not but sink beneath an ordeal so fearful, a test so unequal and disproportionate to mortal strength. Yet she came to this task, resolutely, perhaps, but far from strong. She was weak, dazed and tottering, sustained only by a belief—true or fallacious it matters not, it was a belief, that her position had around it all the halo and glitter of a martyr's doom for a woman's faith. Poor Elizabeth! That hour of bitter anguish was expiation enough for all your faults, whatever those faults may be, and the condemnation of mankind before the extended pardon of your God in that suffering moment will melt and dissipate like snow beneath a tropic sun. How was she placed? On the one side was the reputation, nay the very life of her pastor and her dearest friend; on the other, the church and creed she loved so well. Behind her were her pleading children, on bended knees, with upturned faces and streaming eyes, straining for every word that should fall from the hallowed lips of "mother;" before her was the cruel, the cynical, the critical and pitiless world, and, in the dim distance, lost to her forever, was the shadowy form of Theodore Tilton, desolate, but still erect among the smouldering ruins of a once bright and happy home—a very Eden before the fall. It was a cruel place to put a woman, a wife and mother in. I criticise her not. I but criticize those who placed her on the stand to show distrust and hatred between her husband and herself for years, and made her tell that piteous story. Of course, the tale was long. It could not be supposed that her mind would be entirely clear and tranquil, and I recognize the absolute necessity which suggested a prompter to recall her when she should wander or forget. But have they not rather succeeded by her production and testimony in showing a motive for the offence where before no motive appeared? And herein is the analogy between this case and that which I commenced by relating.

Theodore Tilton had said his wife loved him to adoration, and produced her letters to prove his assertion. Would it not have been better to have let it rest at that, or go further even and confirm it more strongly by her assurance before the committee that it was so? Had this been done the world would have believed that the wife of Theodore loved him so well that the idea of criminality with another man was a monstrous absurdity, and the charge thereof the very muttering and incipient development of insanity. The world would have believed that the honor of the husband had always been well guarded and preserved by the unparalleled affection of his wife, and that the crime was simply impossible.

Instead of this, however, they have labored to show a soil ripe and ready for adultery, and have flung to the winds as worthless the best defence that ever man or woman had to repel, and render infamous forever a charge of marital infidelity.

To-day it is said "the woman lied," and this, too, by those who first invoked her statement, who produced and accredited her to the world as a witness worthy of belief. Too late, too late. They cannot now retrace their steps, destroy her as a witness, and render her testimony valueless in the future as they probably can and will; but this last selfish and ungenerous error is meanest, worst of all, and but suggests the question, if she lied, as you say she did, why did she do it, and why did you let her, knowing, as you must, her story in advance? And the answer comes back in thunder tones from the voice of the people. None lie or avail themselves of lying but to conceal the truth.

BROOKLYN, August 15, 1874. KOPPEDAAR.

MOULTON'S MOVEMENTS.

PORTLAND, Me., August 15, 1874.

Frank D. Moulton, of New York, arrived here by the midnight train, and is stopping at the Falmouth Hotel.

A Search in Vain at Narragansett Pier.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, August 15, 1874.

A correspondent of the HERALD, who thought he was on the track of Moulton, the invisible, arrived this evening at the pier. Knowing the aristocratic proclivities of the "mutual friend," he sought him at the Mount Hope Hotel, where he generally stops, and where the millionnaires and belles of New York congregate. But the "mutual friend" was not among the guests, nor was he at his modest little cottage in Wakefield, which is five miles from the pier. The reporter then looked for him among the crowds of bathers on the beach, but there was no sign of Moulton. His family were unable to state where he was, but from good authority the correspondent learned that he was somewhere in the vicinity of New York—exactly where is not known—where he is awaiting further developments in the great Brooklyn scandal.

WHAT THE CLERGY SAY.

A HERALD representative wandered for hours yesterday in search of the gifted pulpit orators of our sister city. Rev. Drs. Cuyler and Budington are in England; Rev. Dr. Storrs, the confrère of the last in the summoning of the great Congregational Council of last March, is rusticating. So are Rev. Drs. Scudder, of the Central Congregational church, the Hancock street Iron pagoda; Noah Schenck, of St. Ann's Protestant Episcopal; Mr. Paddock, of St. Peter's, in State street; Justin Fulton and Paul Haynes of Baptist and Methodist renown in Hanson place, and a multitude of others among Protestant Christians.

THE CATHOLICS

face the summer weather and "live laborious days," but it was a singularly unfortunate time to secure them for interviewing tortures yesterday. To-day is the Feast of the Assumption, and the reverend fathers were, one and all, as Rev. Father Freel, of St. Charles Borromeo, in Sydney place, informed the HERALD representative, deeply engaged in the solemn preparations for the day, and had to receive, in anticipation of it, scores on scores of penitents at the confessional.

THE SUMMER SUBSTITUTES.

The visiting clergymen from Europe and the provincial towns and villages of this and other States were very hard to catch.

VIEWS OF DR. DURYEA.

The Rev. Joseph T. Duryea, D. D., of the Classon avenue Presbyterian church, the St. Chrysostom of Brooklyn, was found at his home, in Fulton street. His church is closed for repairs, and accordingly, for the first time in many years, he has been forced to interrupt his preaching. An average of six funerals a week and general missionary work keep him fully employed, however, and he says he feels when Sunday comes that the rest is very welcome.

HERALD REPRESENTATIVE—I suppose, Doctor, you know what interviewing is? I have come to ask you to tell me what you think of the great subject now.

Rev. Dr. DURYEA—I have just been reading Mr. Beecher's statement. It seems to me that I read of very little else but this matter now. I am heartily sick and tired of it, and would be very glad of its coming to an end; but there is an irresistible fascination about it, and I read on and on, with more than the zest to be afforded by the most exciting novel.

HERALD REPRESENTATIVE—It would make a good novel.

Rev. Dr. DURYEA—Indeed, nothing could be more dramatic. The contagion of attitudinizing seems to have afflicted all parties. They are all posing before the public, all driving at an ever-fleeing dénouement, all talking and writing in a style very puzzling to plain Anglo-Saxon people. There never was a more close-open set of people in the world than this committee. They are mysteriously secret and yet extremely leaky. Nothing seems to come out that hasn't come out before.

HERALD REPRESENTATIVE—Then you don't think Mr. Beecher's statement throws any new light on the trouble.

Rev. Dr. DURYEA—There's nothing in it that has not been foreshadowed for months; even in detail this thing has been known widely among his friends, and out of the immediate circle of Plymouth church, too. I have read the editorials in the daily papers very carefully, to try and find out what the public feeling really is.

HERALD REPRESENTATIVE—Everybody seems puzzled. What is your opinion, Doctor?

Rev. Dr. DURYEA—I think Mr. Beecher, like the rest, is a great deal too rhetorical. There is NO PROOF.

I do not value Tilton's testimony a rush, nor Moulton's, nor Mrs. Tilton's. The only thing in the way is the letters. They are not explained. Rhetoric makes them incomprehensible. I believed when I first heard of this scandal that it was impossible for Beecher to be guilty. He had everything he wanted—health, the fullest enjoyment of eating, drinking and sleeping; friends, wealth, a proud position before men, the most intoxicating joy of all, the gift of public speaking and sympathetic audiences crowding to hear him. He has been sometimes on the unpopular side of questions, and has the memory of victory to cheer him. Would common sense allow such a man to ruin himself, his family, other families, all who looked up to him for the very inadequate temptation he is charged with? His course in the matter is unaccountable. I believe there is in his nature to which there is no analogy in the natures of any great man of history, something wholly peculiar to himself. His letters prove this. They do not prove him guilty.

A MYSTERIOUS ELEMENT,

HERALD REPRESENTATIVE—A certain portion of the public, presumably represented by papers supposed to reflect their views, seem to assume Mr. Beecher's guilt, and indeed to triumph over it.

Rev. Dr. DURYEA—No one but a very bad man would rejoice in Mr. Beecher's fall. Were he guilty and any man said in my house he was glad of it I would eject him. Sinners want company in their shame. It would not help them before God if Mr. Beecher, distinguished as he is, were guilty. Such diabolism is worthy of the first French Revolution, when the "Goddess of Reason" was worshipped on the altars of Notre Dame. Such must be protested against. I would not leave my children in a land debauched by such doctrines. As to this matter, I hope it will go further, till it is thoroughly settled. It is as long as it remains undetermined. I believe that, great as is the present interest, it will come to be considered in fifty years the greatest social disturbance that ever occurred among mankind.

HERALD REPRESENTATIVE—Do you think Protestantism is jeopardized by the trouble?

Rev. Dr. DURYEA—Not a particle. As to the Catholics, I don't believe their attitude toward Protestantism to-day is one of hostility, certainly not of persecution. Mr. Beecher has always said—and here I have thoroughly been in accord with him—that a Catholic is as good as a Protestant. To try and convert one is wasting ammunition. If you succeed it is merely like pulling a dollar out of one pocket and putting it in another and thinking yourself richer by the operation. All are in the Church, going the same way. It is a matter of perfect indifference which side of the road they take. No! I don't think the Catholics have any reason to be Mr. Beecher's enemies, or that they are. Some Protestants think him too liberal. They cannot forget the Inquisition and other arrangements of centuries ago. This is the nineteenth century. Upon my word, if I had lived in those old days, I think I'd have burnt heretics myself with pious enjoyment. The monks who did it were good men. They really thought, and acted on their belief, that it was better to burn a few heretics' bodies than to peril their souls and the souls of the rest of mankind. It was unpleasant, no doubt, for the people burnt or tortured, but it was done with the best intentions. Mr. Beecher has said, and so have I, that the Bible should not be forced on the children at the public schools. There is no reason why it should not be read a quarter of an hour before school opens, so that those with a conscientious prejudice against it need not be annoyed.

HERALD REPRESENTATIVE—That's the principle of the English government with the public schools in India.

The conversation seemed to have drifted a little from the immediate question, and the HERALD representative bade Dr. Duryea farewell, and marched down the hill through his beautiful grounds and playing children to the downward car.

Interview with a Catholic Clergyman.

In the course of his peregrinations while sounding the religious sentiment touching the effect of the vindicatory statement of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, which was made public yesterday, a reporter of the HERALD met a Catholic clergyman and had the following conversation upon the issue of this scandal upon religion and morality. The name of the clergyman is withheld out of respect for his natural repugnance to publicity.

"What think you, sir, may I ask, of the statement of Mr. Beecher?"

"Well, really, that is a serious question to answer upon brief deliberation. As a literary production I will say, however, that it is a very forcible and able paper."

"What do you say as to its force in refuting the gross accusations that have been made against him?"

"It should be sufficient for the reason that Mr. Beecher, who is now an old man, solemnly asserts his entire innocence, and certainly to a charitable mind there is no reason why it should not be accepted with credence. I have always admired Mr. Beecher for his talents and ability as an orator. He is a wonderful man, and no good citizen can feel aught else than sorrow because of this scandal, which is breaking him down from the pedestal which he has occupied for so many years."

"By the by, the Catholic press has been silent upon this scandal."

"Yes, I am pleased to say that the Catholic newspapers of the country, with, I believe, two or three exceptions, have been silent upon the subject. They have left the question to the monopoly of their separated brethren, and were I disposed to criticise their course I should indeed say the Protestant press have been most bitter in their expression and treatment of Mr. Beecher. The case is really, in my opinion, unfit for publication. Silence in such a case is charity which bespeaks the most powerful illustration of the exercise of that virtue which the Church inculcates in her members."

"Would you suppose that Mr. Beecher would continue to exercise the functions of the ministry in Plymouth church after this avalanche of vituperation and calumny that has fallen upon him?"

"I cannot judge on that point. Henry Ward Beecher is a singular man in very many respects, and what other men in similar circumstances might do or would he would not do. He may remain there and try to live down the present 'hue and cry' that the scandal has raised. Curiosity would lead crowds still to hear him. I am really sorry because of this affair, which must be a great blow, mentally and otherwise, to Mr. Beecher."

This terminated the interview with the priest, and the writer went on his way impressed with the fact that he had met a truly charitable shepherd.

What a Methodist Clergyman Says.

A representative of the HERALD called at the parsonage of the Sands street Methodist Episcopal church and had a brief interview with the Rev. George Taylor, the pastor, who had just returned to the city, having been on his vacation. The reverend gentleman very courteously invited the representative into the parlor. He spoke upon the subject of the scandal with an apparent feeling of delicacy, as the clergy generally expressed a reluctance to converse upon the painful subject.

REPORTER—I have called, Mr. Taylor, to ascertain your opinion in regard to the effect of the Rev. Mr. Beecher's statement upon Christendom as viewed from the pulpit standpoint. Your views will be valuable in measuring the depth of feeling existing upon the subject of the scandal.

Mr. TAYLOR—I have just returned to the city, being on my vacation, and have not yet had time to read the statement of Mr. Beecher. Therefore I am not able to form any opinion in regard to the force of his vindication. Before forming any opinion I should prefer to wait until all the facts are fully brought out on both sides. I suppose this statement of Mr. Beecher will be taken by Mr. Tilton and analyzed. I look upon it at present as an unfortunate affair.

REPORTER—You think this will have a very detrimental effect upon the Christian religion?

Mr. TAYLOR—I think these statements should never have been published. All these ecclesiastical difficulties should be examined privately and confined strictly to the Church.

REPORTER—You are of the opinion they should not be left to the judgment of the public, who will, of course, form a judgement in regard to the matter, whatever may be the verdict of the committee?

Mr. TAYLOR—Well, I do not know. But my idea is, that the publication, whether true or false, is demoralizing to the public conscience. It encourages bad men and shocks good men.

REPORTER—Will Mr. Beecher, in your opinion, continue to occupy the pulpit in Plymouth church?

Mr. TAYLOR—As to Mr. Beecher's continuing to occupy the pulpit, I should say that will depend altogether upon the issue of the matter now under investigation.

REPORTER—Let the verdict be what it may, do you not think there will be a strong feeling on the part of those who stand outside the pale of that church against Mr. Beecher?

Mr. TAYLOR—I think there would be many wicked men who would rejoice in seeing him fall. What I mean by that is that there are many men of sensual minds who would take advantage of everything he would say. Good people, however, will, of course, be swayed by the verdict of the committee. Good men are governed by their love for virtue, and bad men by their love for evil. An honorable man would be delighted in his popularity and usefulness; but all men, I am sorry to say, are not honorable.

REPORTER—What do you think of the statement as a literary production?

Mr. TAYLOR—I have not analyzed it. I have not had time to do so, but from what I have read it is like everything else he does. It appears to be a very strong document. I saw the HERALD's account and intend to read it carefully.

Rev. Dr. Freeman on the Statement.

The pastor of the Siloam Presbyterian church, in Prince street, near Myrtle avenue, a colored minister of much celebrity and a very intelligent man, was visited by a representative of the HERALD yesterday afternoon. He found the reverend gentleman seated in his study in the cosey church, and was courteously received.

REPORTER—I have called, Mr. Freeman, for the purpose of obtaining your views as a minister of the gospel upon the statement made by the pastor of Plymouth church in his defence. What effect will it have upon the religious mind of the community?

Mr. FREEMAN—I was just looking over the HERALD, and I am anxious to finish the production before I will be able to give any serious opinion upon this grave question.

REPORTER—What do you think will be the effect of the document? Do you think the vindication will be complete in the eyes of the world?

Mr. FREEMAN (slowly and cautiously)—Before answering I should like to read and carefully weigh the whole of this matter. After reading the remainder of the document I might have a different view upon the case.

REPORTER—How will religion and morality be effected by this scandal, Doctor?

Mr. FREEMAN—So far as I am able to judge it will have a very bad and detrimental effect upon religion and morality, for the time being at all events. What I mean to have you understand by "the time being" is, that these things which are ringing in the popular ear and blurring moral susceptibilities, as it were, will wear away, and in years to come the injurious effect will have passed into oblivion.

REPORTER—Well, you are inclined, Mr. Freeman, to the belief, from what you say and from what you have read, that Mr. Beecher will be able to establish his innocence before the world?

Mr. FREEMAN—I hope he may, sir. Yet I cannot say that I believe he will, for I am not sufficiently conversant with the evidence to form an opinion—that is a positive and decided opinion. The case will, in all probability, be concluded in the courts, and that proceeding might change the whole complexion of the affair.

REPORTER—Do you think Mr. Beecher will court an open investigation in the courts in order that he may satisfy those who may question the thoroughness of the investigation before the committee?

Mr. FREEMAN—I don't suppose he will want to have the case go before the courts. It would do him no good, nor would it advance the cause of religion.

REPORTER—Do you opine that the amount of good Mr. Beecher has accomplished in his ministry will be sufficient to obliterate the evil which has been laid at his door by his enemies?

Mr. FREEMAN—It is a hard question for me to answer. If there should be no further developments from what I have seen I think that the good which he has done will greatly overbalance all this evil, if I may so express it.

REPORTER—You believe, then, that Mr. Beecher, although advanced in years and in the autumn of life, will live down this affliction which has befallen him?

Mr. FREEMAN—Yes, sir, I am of that opinion.

REPORTER—He will, in your opinion, continue to occupy the pulpit of Plymouth church?

Mr. FREEMAN—Oh, yes; I see nothing at present to prevent him from going on with his work.

REPORTER—As a Christian minister and a teacher of extensive experience, do you advise such a course?

Mr. FREEMAN—I don't know what would be best, sir. It seems to me, however, that if Mr. Beecher came to me and asked me for my advice, and it was to be decided by me, I would say, "Mr. Beecher, hold on." There may come up something more besides what I have seen that may change my opinion, and I might say otherwise.

REPORTER—From what you have seen, heard and read you think, I infer, that the case has not been fully explained?

Mr. FREEMAN—Well, I think the evidence is not all in yet.

REPORTER—Now, what would be the effect of the committee's verdict of "Not guilty?" Would that satisfy public expectation?

Mr. FREEMAN—As the case stands I think such a decision from the committee would not suffice. There will be a general desire to bring out the facts that may not have come out before the committee. I do not think the public have the facts as they demand them.

REPORTER—It is your opinion that Mr. Beecher being innocent, should court the broadest investigation possible?

Mr. FREEMAN—I do not think it should be taken into the courts. No good could come of it.

REPORTER—The colored people are friendly, are they not, to Mr. Beecher in this case?

Mr. FREEMAN—Yes, they are. I am personally acquainted with Mr. Beecher, and have long been on terms of friendship with Theodore Tilton. Mr. Tilton has spoken in this church, and I deprecate very much the unfortunate controversy that involves both gentlemen and has been the occasion for this investigation. Both gentlemen have the warm sympathy of the people of my congregation and of colored folks generally. It is well known that Mr. Tilton has been a stanch friend of our race, and so has Mr. Beecher, and it therefore makes it difficult for us to take sides. Until I have the evidence in full before me I shall not take sides. I do not wish to sacrifice my friends.

REPORTER—As a literary composition, so far as you have read, what is your opinion?

Mr. FREEMAN—It struck me, sir, that it was not quite up to what I expected. It lacked a good deal of that vigor and force which Mr. Beecher has always displayed in his writings. I look for anything from him as being strong and full, and I think this production in some respects lacking. No man of his standing could fail to feel acutely the position in which he has been placed. I am of the opinion that this affair will have a tendency to lessen his influence in the Christian ministry.

REPORTER—Do you think the scandal will lessen the attendance at Plymouth church?

Mr. FREEMAN—Oh, I think he will draw just as large crowds as ever he did—possibly larger assemblages. If he were to preach next Sunday there would be an unusual throng. But curiosity more than religious desire would be the incentive to their attendance. Should he ask the attendants to join the church they might hesitate to do so.

The reporter withdrew from the portals of the Siloam church meditating upon the effect of the above publication.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Steel's Views.

The Rev. Dr. William C. Steel, the pastor of the Fleet street Methodist Episcopal church, late of Beekman Hill, N. Y., and prominent as a temperance advocate, was visited last evening, at his residence adjoining the church in Fleet street, by a HERALD reporter, who solicited his views upon the popular bearings of sentiment regarding the Beecher statement. The reverend gentleman said he was glad to have an opportunity to give public expression to his views upon the case.

REPORTER—What will be the effect of the published defence of Mr. Beecher?

Mr. STEEL—Well, you will find the Brooklyn clergymen are all in favor of Mr. Beecher. I have only been in this city since last spring, but I find during this period of excitement that the general opinion of the Christian people has been favorable to him, believing him to be entirely innocent. Mr. Moulton and Mr. Tilton have used him, and the feeling against them I find is very strong. I have been about the town considerable to-day, and have heard this matter discussed; and the unanimous opinion upon all sides is that the statement of Mr. Beecher is full and explicit and a complete vindication. The brother of Mrs. Tilton, Mr. Richards, who was formerly proprietor of the Independent, before Mr. Bowen purchased it, was at one time Sunday School Superintendent in my church. He is now living in Montclair, N. J. I remember Mrs. Tilton as a bright-eyed little girl, who used to be an attendant at the Sands street Methodist Episcopal Sunday school. She was a great pet, and when she grew up and married Mr. Tilton she was very proud of her choice. He was young and ambitious, and she shared in his hope of future success in life. She lacked decision of character, however, but was loving, gentle, affectionate, full of honest sympathy—just such a woman as you would imagine her to be. She had a great admiration for her pastor, Mr. Beecher. There are many members of his church who now attend mine, and are very sensitive about everything that is said on the subject of the scandal, feeling grateful for any expression in his favor. I prayed for Mr. Beecher last Sunday night when several of his parishioners were present. I think his statement is a very clear one and has the ring of an honest, noble man about it. I was over at the Independent office just before Tilton left. At that time it was just like the firing of musketry. Letters came pouring in—"Stop my paper, stop my paper." I asked Mr. Eggleston, who was then connected with the paper, in regard to Mr. Tilton's moral character, he had so fallen off in orthodoxy. Eggleston said he would not like to say anything about it. Eggleston shortly after took Tilton's place, as his heterodox articles had brought the paper into disfavor, especially in the West. Tilton would not accede to the request of Mr. Bowen and his associates, and, having supreme control of the paper, wrote whatever he chose.

REPORTER—What do you think will be the effect of the report of the committee when made public—will it amply justify him?

Mr. STEEL—I think it will be accepted by Mr. Beecher's friends, and there are a large number who count Mr. Beecher innocent. The public generally will be very lenient toward him. There will, of course, be a strong anti-Beecher party—a party who will favor Tilton and Moulton. They will be in the minority, though.

REPORTER—Do you think the blackmail allusions in the defence published are true?

Mr. STEEL—Yes. Mr. Tilton received $5,000 on the Union and $5,000 on the Independent, and he also wrote articles for the Revolution which made his income about $12,000. Now, take this from him suddenly, and where does it leave the man? Tilton was an elegant writer, and when he started the Golden Age it seemed to have a good circulation. I took it, but I soon gave it up.

REPORTER—Think you Tilton and Moulton will retaliate upon this blackmailing charge?

Mr. STEEL—I suppose they will, but the sympathy is with Mr. Beecher, and his statement will be accepted. Mr. Beecher says he mortgaged his house at $5,000, and that is rather hard, you know, and excites sympathy for him. The blackmail will be brought out. Why, Carpenter tried to get money from him on the plea of sending Tilton to Europe. The very idea of it is abhorrent. This is one of the strongest Methodist churches in the city, and the people stand firmly for Mr. Beecher. Last Sunday night I preached a sermon, taking for my text Galatians vi., 1:—"Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault ye which are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." I read the editorial in the HERALD on the "Gathering of the Ravens," and I consider it one of the best articles that has been written upon the subject.

A Colored Presbyterian Clergyman.

A representative of the HERALD last evening interviewed Rev. Henry Highland Garnett, the well known eloquent and popular colored Presbyterian minister, at the latter's residence on Amity street, near Sullivan, in relation to the Beecher-Tilton controversy. The following conversation ensued:—

REPORTER—Have you read Mr. Beecher's recent statement?

Mr. GARNETT—I have read everything that relates to the matter. It has had a painful interest to me as a man and a Christian minister, for I was a friend to both parties, for they have been friends to me and my people. I am not biased, for in my view of the case I have endeavored to be able, at the conclusion of the testimony, to form a correct opinion as to the merits.

REPORTER—Do you think Mr. Beecher guilty?

Mr. GARNETT—As far as the case has been developed, judging from all the testimony, I am unable to see anything that could convince me of Mr. Beecher's guilt.

REPORTER—You have not allowed any of the developments to prejudice your mind in favor of Mr. Beecher, have you?

Mr. GARNETT—No, of course not. I do not wish to condemn Mr. Tilton exactly when I affirm my honest belief in Mr. Beecher's innocence. Both Mr. Tilton and Mr. Beecher, for many, many years, have been my friends and friends of my race. Their service in the anti-slavery cause is too well known, and cannot be disregarded or forgotten. But looking without prejudice at Mr. Beecher's statement I must say I think it furnishes an entire refutation of the charges brought against him.

REPORTER—It would seem natural for one to condemn Mr. Tilton if he believed him guilty of such gross slanders against the fair name and fame of Mr. Beecher, would it not? What can excuse his course?

Mr. GARNETT—I believe Mr. Tilton is mistaken. There is

and he has been instigated—perhaps driven—by a secret party to accuse Mr. Beecher. That hidden hand has fanned the flame in secret and urged him on in secret, and now is awaiting the result of the bitter war.

REPORTER—Do you think it possible that your theory is correct?

Mr. GARNETT—I do believe it to be so. It is quite possible that Tilton has not been himself. He is an ardent, poetical individual—takes a florid view of almost everything he looks at. I judge from his writings, his public discourses, and his connection with the class of people he has of late years associated with that his ideas, to speak plainly, have been corrupted. Mr. Tilton was not the Tilton of other years when he wrote that flaming biography of Victoria Woodhull. He has seemed to me a changed man ever since.

REPORTER—What do you think of Mr. Moulton?

Mr. GARNETT—I was at first inclined to look upon him as a high-toned gentleman. I am rather perplexed at his course of late, though I can readily perceive how Mr. Beecher and Mr. Tilton were from the first inclined to keep secret or away from public notice their difficulties. Many a person placed in Mr. Beecher's position would have done, perhaps, as he has done. I can also conceive how a man, under similar circumstances, could be induced to pay money to keep the scandal from breaking out; but I would never have done so. I would have had my accuser arrested. You remember the case of Rev. Dr. Carter, an Episcopal minister of this city, who some time ago was blackmailed by a young woman. He simply went and had her arrested and convicted, and thus saved his reputation as well as his money.

REPORTER—Do you think Mr. Beecher will take the case to court?

Mr. GARNETT—I do not. He has all along acted on the defensive, and I guess he is magnanimous enough to forgive.

REPORTER—You said a while ago that you thought Mr. Tilton must have been urged on by other parties. Can you give names?

Mr. GARNETT—I would rather not. There are men who were jealous of Mr. Beecher's high fame and reputation. It is almost natural that they should be of the standing of the most popular minister of modern times—who controlled the wealthiest and most powerful church in the land. Even ministers can be found who are capable of petty meannesses and weaknesses, of jealousies and deceit. And I think there are those who preach the Gospel, or pretend to do so, who would more than rejoice at Beecher's downfall. I can readily conceive how a man can become a violent enemy of another when the least act is done or committed to disrupt a domestic union. Mr. Beecher admits having done an injury, but his apology, it seems to me, should have settled this difference long ago. But, as I said before, I do not believe Mr. Tilton is pressing these charges against Mr. Beecher solely of his own accord. There is a power behind him

AND HE IS A TOOL.

There has been some hidden power designing the ruin of both Beecher and Tilton.

REPORTER—And you will not give me an inkling of what that hidden power is?

Mr. GARNETT—I do not wish to go out to the world as a contributor to this scandal. But this much I do say, that if there is a legal investigation the hidden hand will be revealed. Almost every party concerned in this matter, I am sure, dreads a legal investigation more than Mr. Beecher does. And I think Mr. Beecher should demand one. Justice to himself and his millions of friends requires it.

After some further conversation bearing upon the case Rev. Mr. Garnett said there was another point he would like to make—"People are supposing that this case will be very injurious to the interests of

EVANGELICAL RELIGION.

If Mr. Beecher shall be proved guilty of the charges brought against him, and I believe he will not, then it will only prove that his life has not been in conformity with the principles of evangelical religion, and therefore his conduct must go with the conduct of those who do not profess to be Christians, as all men agree that conduct of that kind is contrary to the precepts of the Christian religion. If innocent, and I believe he has proved himself to be so, another evidence will be furnished that persecution is inseparable from an exalted useful Christian life, and he will come out better than ever, as gold tried in the fire, and better prepared for the work of his Master."

THE PRESS ON THE DEFENCE.

There can be no doubt that the defence of Mr. Beecher has aroused a strong feeling in favor of his probable innocence; but most of our exchanges receive it with caution, and either avoid any expression of opinion for or against him or demand that Mr. Moulton shall be forced to tell all he knows in a court of law. We append a few extracts from our exchanges.

To Mr. Moulton It Is Destruction.

[From the Tribune of yesterday.]

The blackmail feature is the really destructive matter. It scarcely helps Mr. Beecher, but it falls like the lightning upon his assailants. It shows Mr. Tilton's attitude in the business as touching the depth of infamy. To Mr. Moulton it is destruction. Mr. Carpenter only escapes on the ground that he knew no better. Unless they can promptly break the force of this revelation or disprove Mr. Beecher's explicit (and, in the cross-examination, detailed) averment, the whole pack of his pursuers are placed by it beside Woodhull, and need occupy the thoughts of decent men or women no more forever.

Beecher's Quondam Friends.

[From the Times of yesterday.]

Whatever Mr. Beecher's statement may do for his own character, it certainly places the character of some of his quondam friends and confidants in a most unenviable light. * * * We do not like to impugn Mr. Moulton's knowledge or application of the Scriptures, but it really looks as if he had got his beatitudes a little mixed, and had pursued his tortuous way under the impression that "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall inherit the earth." The worst feature of the case is that the discomforts of these gentlemen may induce them to afflict the public with more of this interminable tangle.

"Greatly to the Credit of Mr. Beecher," &c.

[From the World of yesterday.]

It is greatly to the credit of Mr. Beecher, and it will go not a little way with decent people towards redeeming the deplorable weakness of which he has now so manfully confessed himself guilty, that, while he was the last of all the persons involved in this wretched Brooklyn history to open his lips on the subject, he is the only one of them all who has had the courage and honesty, when at last he broke silence, to say all that he had to say without reservation or subterfuge. * * * Social degradation can have but small terrors for a man like Tilton, who has made himself the biographer of a blatant bawd, or for a man like Moulton, of whom it now appears that this blatant bawd has been a welcome guest under his roof. If the law could do all that the law ought perhaps to be able to do for the vindication of the moral interests of the community, here would be a notable case, indeed, for the unbridling of all its terrors.

No Progress Made.

[From the Daily Graphic.]

To any one who looks at the matter with impartiality, it is plain that no real progress in the investigation has been made by Mr. Beecher's testimony. Mr. Tilton charged under oath that Mr. Beecher had been guilty of adultery. Mr. Beecher answers—not, however, under oath—that he is innocent. The letters which formed the evidence adduced by Mr. Tilton—for his wife's testimony may be considered wholly unworthy of attention—are not explained by Mr. Beecher in a way that will fully satisfy the public at large. Practically, the case stands to-day just where it did a week ago.

No Matter What Moulton Says.

[From last night's Brooklyn Eagle.]

In our opinion it does not now make any difference what Moulton says or testifies. To say now that Mr. Beecher did not admit adultery to him is to confess that he was a party to the plunder of a clergyman by imposing on his weaknesses. In asserting that Mr. Beecher did make such a confession Mr. Moulton must confess that he is a man who believes that his "friend" can forgive his wife's adultery, providing the man who is a partner in the crime pays roundly as an extenuation of the offence. In either case Frank Moulton has no standing in a court of justice or before that wider tribunal in which the issue is decided by the common test of ordinary manhood.

After a More Careful Reading.

[From the Mail of last evening.]

A more careful reading of Mr. Beecher's defence than we were able to give to it yesterday morning deepens our conviction of its ingenuousness, while heightening our admiration for its masterly review of the most pitiable entanglement in which a great, generous, unsuspecting and much-forgiving man ever found himself.

A Hurried Verdict.

[From last evening's Express.]

If public opinion, as we see it and read it among decent people, means anything, it is the acquittal of Mr. Beecher of all wrong done or intended toward Mrs. Tilton. The whole thing has been a conspiracy, and a very base one, and a conspiracy so well designed, continued and consummated as to entrap a too credulous man.

Moulton Must Speak.

[From last evening's Commercial Advertiser.]

Mr. Frank D. Moulton is reported to have prepared a statement which covers the entire record of the scandal, and which is said by his friends to clear the accusers of Mr. Beecher of every charge which has been made against them. This statement is of right the property of the public, which has been unwillingly, and, as we believe, unnecessarily made the judge in this tremendous scandal. No privilege of person, no private right, can entitle Mr. Moulton to withhold this statement longer from the light.

Mr. and Mrs. Tilton and F. D. Moulton.

[From the Sun of yesterday.]

If Mr. Beecher can be crushed by Mr. and Mrs. Tilton and F. D. Moulton, then may not any clergyman in this country be ruined by one bad man and one weak or wicked woman, with one cunning and unscrupulous ally, perfectly innocent though he be?

The Penitentiary or the Insane Asylum.

[From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.]

If Mr. Beecher is indeed the victim which he claims to have been, the penitentiary or the insane asylum is the only proper retreat for the authors of the monstrous fraud. If the whole thing has been trumped up out of the dotings and hysterics of a weak woman, the morbid chafing of a soured and licentious man and the officious assistance of a "business man" attempting the rôle of a "friend sent from God," it is an awful warning.

A VISION OF HOME.

NORTHWEST MISSOURI, IN THE CARS, Dec. 18, 1866.

MY BELOVED PET—I have now four letters of yours in my pocket. They make me rich. I often take them out and read little choice sentences of love over and over again.

I have been thinking of the difference between separation by distance and separation by death. It seems now as if I could not endure to pass a day without writing to you; it would be a violence to my feelings. Even now, when this old, shaking and jolting rail-car almost makes it impossible for me to write, I nevertheless cannot help writing. I believe that if you were not on the earth, but in heaven, I could not help writing you a letter every day. My feelings overflow, and if I do not express them I suffer pain.

Mrs. ——'s letter, received yesterday, gave me a little glimpse of your perfect love for your husband. She said that you showed her one of my letters while sitting with her in church, and that she never knew any woman to lavish so much love upon a man as you upon me. That was the sweetest word in all her letter. I thank you for your profession of affection. Perhaps I ought not to speak of changes in myself, as not being the best judge in my own case; and I sincerely believe that your devotion, fidelity and lavishment of love are making me a better man. In one of my letters I mentioned that sometimes I felt as if you were praying for me at that moment. I have had the same impression many times since. Against such a guardian influence I dare not do or think wrong. You are a wall about me day and night. I have never lived so victorious a life, in my soul, as during these lonely winter days. If selfish thoughts come up, I chide them down. If the spirit of this world seizes my blood, I remember that the only greatness is in moral strength, in self-denial, in the patient performance of duty, in a steadfast forelooking to the Eternal Life.

The more I think of the whole subject of religion, of theology, of the Church, of doctrines, of creeds, I am inclined to undervalue or rather see the little value of everything but the Christian character. All my life long I have had a daily familiarity with religious creeds, exercises and worship; and still, after all, I am yet to lay a first foundation of a true Christian character. I see so much in my travels that goes to show how men content themselves with low lives instead of high, with vulgar thoughts instead of pure, with selfish greed instead of generous self-sacrifice, that hereafter I mean to take pattern, not after men, but after the Great Teacher. The words that keep rising in my ears are, "Be ye therefore perfect, as your Father in heaven is perfect." Our lives are to be not merely good, but the best; our thoughts not merely high, but the highest; our purposes not only noble, but the noblest.

Now, my darling, I have found out a way of visiting home without your knowing it. I have bought a little Scotch cap, which I carry in my pocket except while I ride in the cars. Once on my head, it feels like a gentle hand laid against my forehead. As soon as I get weary in my ride I draw my cap over my eyes, shut out the daylight, step across the Mississippi, the prairies, the Alleghenies and the East River back to Brooklyn. I glide my night key, without noise, into my own door, and step into the hall on tiptoe. First of all I sit a moment in the great armchair, and look around at the pictures, the statuette and the dome. Then I creep softly into the parlor and sit on the red lounge. Nobody is at the piano or organ. Where can the folks be? I see a light in the library. It is midnight. You are sitting at your desk writing a letter to me, not dreaming that I am at that very moment looking over your shoulder. But, like one in a dream, if I put out my hand to touch you, I cannot do it. There you sit. I can only see you, love you and bless you. I cannot make known my presence. I suppose this is the experience of the disembodied dead who revisit the living. Meanwhile the living, unaware of the dead, cry:—

Oh! for the touch of a vanished hand
And the sound of a voice that is still.

I leave you at your desk and glide upstairs. The two little girls are fast asleep in one bed. I peep into my own chamber and see a bed and pillow uncrushed by any sleeper. The pictures on the walls give me solace and welcome. I open the door of the dark room and remember its delights of naps and nestlings and prayers. I take a glimpse of Cad and Libbie. I go into the third story to see if you have any company in the guest-chamber. No; nobody but the pictured soldier who has returned to find his wife dead. Better he had fallen in the wars. I say to myself, "Am I a ghost or not? Am I alive or dead?" I come down stairs again, take another look at the dear writer at her desk, and then suddenly rush out of the house, hastening back, over hill and valley, river and lake, to get to my appointment 2,000 miles from home, where I wait wistfully until the letter which I saw you writing shall be delivered to my hand.

I told you that I have now four of your letters. I saw you write them all! O my sweet sister, wife, and angel,—all in one,—love me for evermore. Yours devoutly, THEODORE.

I have taken no pains to see the newspapers—what they say of me; and half that I see I don't stop to read. But I think you will be amused at the enclosed reference to yourself. No—I've lost the paper after all. But it had an article from the Cincinnati Gazette describing me as an unmarried man, and a reply by the Cincinnati Commercial, mentioning the "olive plants around Mr. Tilton's table."

To you, the mother-stalk of these plants, and to the tender plants themselves, I send my love. As ever, THEODORE.

ALTON, Ill., Dec. 21, 1866.

MY DARLING—Feeling unusually weary to-day I brought up your accidental mention that you had lately fainted. My darling, I have always noticed that when I have been absent from home for a considerable period I return to find you degenerated in health. Be less disturbed in your mind. It is your spirit that wearies your flesh. You have a great soul in a small frame. Sitting up late is not to be pardoned by your too-indulgent husband. But when you are weak and weary I hope that, as unto St. Bernard in his exhaustion, many more of the ministering angels will guide you daily round about. Ever your own THEODORE TILTON.

"THE STAR OF THE EAST."

ALTON HOTEL, Ill., Dec. 21, 1866.

MY DOVE— . . . You see how often I am driven to the comfort of writing you letters, since I am denied the luxury of seeing you face to face. The moment my heart begins to ache that moment I seize my pen. My love-letters have all been the pouring of oil on my own wounds. Some people have a beautiful liberty of expression through music, sitting at the keys of a piano, and translating their thoughts into "concord of sweet sounds." My gates of utterance are only two—speech and pen. My speech goes now to the public; my pen to you. I give thanks daily for Uncle Sam's kindness in carrying a mail bag between myself and my lady-love. Suppose we lived in the stage-coach days, and were, as now, a thousand miles apart! It would take a letter a month to trip across the prairies from the Mississippi to Brooklyn.

To-morrow I shall dedicate myself to writing for the Independent. I have an army, a legion of readers in the West. Almost every man who speaks to me says, "Well, sir, I read what you write every week." This has lately been said so often that I tremble at the responsibility of writing for so many devouring readers. I shall spend my holiday at hard work. In fact, writing has become a necessary diversion of my mind from speaking. Reading does not answer the purpose. Books are rather flat to me in my present temper of mind.

Still, I think I would be content to-morrow if the Little Lady were here to read aloud to her husband. If, indeed, you were here, what fine times we would have! Are you not coming? Some morning, when the sky is unusually bright, I shall know that the Star of the East is coming to the West. "Hail, holy light!" Yours ever, THEODORE TILTON.

THE ART OF WRITING LETTERS—A DISQUISITION ON LYING.

ALTON, Ill., Dec. 22, 1866.

MY DEAR PET— . . . I sat down with the idea of writing for the Independent. But, apparently finding nothing in my brain worth saying to my public readers, I have switched off from the main track, and am here scribbling another of my daily nothings to the one dear creature who thinks that my chaff is always wheat. What is it that you find in my letters to excite your praises?

I am sure that, after I have written, and turn around to read them, they appear to be poor and meagre enough. Now and then I come upon some womanly, Christian, profound sentence or expression in your letters, that proves (what I knew before) that the art of writing beautiful letters does not belong to literary men and women more than to other men and women. As in a mirror one shows his face to himself, so in a letter one shows his heart to his friend. The writing may be poor, and yet the letter good. But, in a perfect sentence, which is made to fit like a glove around the modeled shape of some worthy thought, there is something in the mere expression, independent of the thought, that sometimes has a charm indescribable.

Some of the finest literature in the world is contained in wise and rich letters—many of them never destined to be read by more than one reader. The most interesting books are biographies, mainly on account of their personality. But letters are still more personal. A letter is mutually enkindling—it puts both writer and reader in a glow of love and good will toward the other. Letters, like prayers, ought never to admit an untrue word—never a conventional for a direct expression—never any of the little lies of polite usage.

For instance, I don't like a letter to end with, "I am your obedient servant." No form of expression, however customary, ought to be used which is not strictly honest. Accordingly, to a man whom I did not like, I would never say, "My dear sir," but simply "Sir." The more I see of the little fibs current in society the more I despise them. Let us teach our children to speak the truth; and, to this end, let us speak it ourselves. I have long thought that the habit of communicating to each other, as husbands and wives, as friends and friends, our secretest and deepest-hidden thoughts, without disguise and without misrepresentation, would finally breed a greater reverence for honesty and truthfulness than now prevails.

If a man wilfully misstates an outward fact, it is a lie, and he sins against society. But if he wilfully deceives by representing his thoughts to be better than they are, which is usually the case with men who indulge in religious cant, and are the prayer mongers at Friday night meetings, then such a man equally is guilty of lying, although his sin of falsehood is not so much against society as against himself. I believe that of all the virtues the greatest is to speak the truth. With which moral, as Robert Browning says, "I drop my theorbo."

This is enough sermonizing for Saturday night. O, my little, black-eyed pet, I love you better than my life itself. THEODORE.

DISSATISFIED WITH THE CHURCHES.

ALTON, Ill., Dec. 23, 1866.

MY DARLING:—Oh for a direct gaze into the pure blue! "For now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face."

I have lately said to myself, "Let me forget all that I have been taught of sectarianism, of hidebound theologies, of stereotyped creeds; and let me, instead, go direct to God, and ask for His light to shine on my face, as on Moses of old." I am dissatisfied with the churches and their teachings. They stand between our minds and the light. They mean well, but they know not what they do. I believe in God's daily revelations to the human soul. As He makes daily gift of the sun to the earth, so He makes daily disclosures of His glory to our souls. But if we shut the eyes either of our bodies or our souls we cannot expect to see. I am striving to tear off, little by little, since I cannot do it at a stroke, some of the bandages that have hitherto bound me blind. "Mine eyes unto Thee, O God." Your best lover, THEODORE.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Dec. 27, 1866.

MY DARLING: If I had six tongues instead of one I could employ them all and every night. I had a touch of home sickness this morning. It came from the sunshine that poured into my room from the lustrous southeast. The wall, the carpet, the chairs, all glowed and glittered under the touch of the goldsmith. I wanted then a certain shining face to sit in my rocking chair, in whose eyes I might look and on whose lips I might hang.

I allow these, and such like moods, to fill me awhile with a delicious sadness; and then I fight them down, and go to work. I don't expect, however, to be lonesome much longer; for I am to meet you in Chicago. Now, that the other man has gone off lecturing (as your letter mentions), you can afford to come to me. You ought to be enjoying what I am enjoying on this magnificent trip—for instance, this afternoon, a dinner party. Leave home, children, kith and kin, and cleave unto him to whom you originally promised to cleave. You promised the other man to cleave to me, and yet you leave me all alone and cleave to him.

O, frailty! thy name is woman.

If you can get anybody to pour tea for you, and to take sauce from the servants, and to receive pastoral visits, I shall expect to meet you under the roof of Robert Hatfield. Yours eternally, THEODORE.

PRIVATE WORTH VS. PUBLIC REPUTATION.

VINTON, Iowa, Dec. 29, 1866.

MY DARLING: . . . After lighting my lamp this evening, I arranged all the letters which I have received from my dear pet, each according to its date, and I shall read them all over again to-morrow, from beginning to end. They make a little pocket volume which I carry with me wherever I go, and which I read whenever I grow homesick.

The older I grow the less do I regard public reputation and the more do I revere private worth. A man, like myself, who, for a little dexterity in speaking or writing, gets a reputation that outmeasures real desert, is not to be compared, in point of moral heroism, with hundreds and thousands of the brave men and women who live in log cabins and under thatched roofs. Let us henceforth be noble, unselfish, courageous and humble. Ever yours, THEODORE.

REVIEWING HIS LIFE.

VINTON, Iowa, Dec. 31, 1866.

MY DARLING—This is the last night and the last hour of the old year. I have returned from my lecture and its crowd to my chamber and its solitariness. It is quite probable that you are sitting up at this late hour, meditating and perhaps sorrowing. I have been all day working for the Independent, all the evening in making a long speech, all the later hours before midnight in seeing friends, and now I am alone with yourself. So I have had no time for thoughts appropriate to the season, unless I indulge them now.

I feel no disposition to make resolves, seeing how easily the best intents to live well are thwarted by one's own weakness against daily temptations. In reviewing my life, and comparing my present views, aims and temper with former years, I believe the chief changes are these:—I have now less care for reputation and applause, and more admiration for a sterling character. But I believe that I have less self-respect than in former days. I once thought myself a good, true and upright man. But now, when I judge myself by Christ's rule of the thought as well as of the deeds—what I think as well as what I feel—I find myself a constant sinner.

Lately I have many times bowed my head like a bulrush. I have once or twice done right under strong provocation to do wrong, and I have several times done wrong under a mere gossamer of temptation. The carriage of my mind in perfect justice toward my fellow-men is a hard thing to accomplish every day. It is a white day when I even partly succeed. Oh, New Year! bring me the gift of a higher ideal of life and a stouter heart to achieve it. Your passionate lover, THEODORE.

A RESOLVE TO PERFORM A DAILY ACT OF KINDNESS.

WATERLOO, Ia., New Year's Night, 1867.

MY DARLING:—I wish you a Happy New Year. I wonder how you have spent the day. I spent it mainly in a wagon ride of 30 miles over the prairies from Vinton to Waterloo, starting at 9 in the morning, and arriving at 3 in the afternoon. Bitter cold the day has been, and yet I enjoyed my ride as almost a luxury. There is something wonderfully invigorating in this Iowa atmosphere. Wrapped securely against the cold, one makes his journey with perpetual refreshment of soul. During all my ride I was thinking of what good resolution would be most profitable for me to make, with the least fatality of breaking it as soon as made. At last I determined that to resolve that I would be a better man would simply be vague and intangible; to resolve that I would be more unselfish, or more self-denying, or more prayerful, would be simply to repeat old good-intents which I had grown into a habit, long ago, of non-fulfilling; and accordingly I resolved that, instead of attempting to attain some improved inward state, I would chain my mind to the daily performance of some outward act which would react upon my mind and heart within. Finally I fixed my resolution at this: "Resolved, That I will henceforth make it my bounden duty to perform each day some act of kindness, however small, to some fellow creature." I shall try this plan of improving my character, and I think it will work out a better result than much of my religious, and perhaps somewhat morbid, meditations, reveries and longings. Will you join me in the resolution? Let us carry it out hand in hand.

. . . Oh, how my heart bounds at the sight of your handwriting! I never have loved you half as well as during my winter's separation. Day by day, and hour after hour, I think of you, live in you, cast my honors at your feet, invoke Heaven's blessing on your life, and place you before me as my pattern of saintship in this world. You are a darling! Your sweet letters make my blood dance with joy. I pour out my soul upon you to-night. May the New Year bring you a horn of plenty, full of benedictions, and empty them all into your lap! You are the best, the truest, the purest and the wifeliest of women! I kiss you good night. THEODORE.

"A NEWER TESTAMENT."

CEDAR FALLS, Ia., Jan. 8, 1867.

MY SUPREME PET: . . . Your letters are a well of living water from which I drink daily, quenching my soul's thirst. I have preserved every scrap of your handwriting, together with the children's, and the package is a little book of sacred writings. They are a Newer Testament than the New. I think, on the whole, you do me as much good as St. Paul, who hadn't a very great opinion of women! But if he were alive now and were acquainted with you and your loving ways, what an epistle he could write. . . .

At this moment in the parlor of this hotel, a bride and groom are receiving calls. The pair are youngsters—as you and I were once. I looked at them with a smile, and said to myself, "Poor creatures! you think you are happy; you imagine that you know what love is; but you have not yet tasted your happiness, and have not yet known your love. Wait ten years." Love ripens late.

I thank God that my heart is at peace: that my wife is the best of human characters; that I crave nothing more for my wedded life henceforth than that I may grow to be more worthy of God's sweet gift of the dearest of pets to one of the least deserving of men. . . . Your own THEODORE.

"LIFE'S MAIN PURPOSE OUGHT TO BE TO LOVE."

MT. VERNON, Ia., Jan. 3, 1867.

MY LITTLE MISTRESS: If we do not love we might better never have been born. It is a very great saying, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Business, public labors, riches, reputation—all these are merely incidents in the life whose main purpose ought to be to love. Let us, therefore, more than ever before, love one another with kindliness, forbearance, earnestness and wisdom. Then, if we should have achieved nothing besides a perfect union of two loving hearts, we shall have wrought out for ourselves a heaven on earth, and perhaps afterward the heaven above the earth. Yours forever, THEODORE TILTON.

MEDITATIONS IN A GRAVEYARD.

ON THE CARS FROM INDEPENDENCE TO CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Jan. 4, 1869.

MY DARLING: An old man is sitting in the next seat, half dozing, talking to himself and smiling as if he were in great merriment. He has found an invisible circle of pleasure within his own mind, and he sits in the centre of it, crowned with joy. Occasionally he lurches his head, lifts his forefinger and gesticulates like a grandfather entertaining his pets. I would give a good deal to look in upon the inward spectacle—the imaginary picture—that is creating so much fun in his brain.

This old man has set me to thinking of the fountains of happiness. They are many, if we only knew where to find them. They are like springs in meadows. We walk near them and among them every day, but we never think of looking under the grass to discover them. I remember in Carlyle some such remark as this, that "Happiness is cheap if we only applied to the right merchant for it." The chief happiness of our lives is in little things. And if we do not learn the art of being made happy by trifles we shall never learn it at all.

For instance, what happiness could I find in my weary journeyings if I did not glean it here and there from little, meagre incidents, enjoyed a while and then forgotten? I had a very happy hour this morning. Wrapped in my furs, I wandered along the picturesque banks of a frozen stream, and found myself first in a grove of oaks, and then in a graveyard. I am fond of idling among tombs, and I shall finally be a complete idler among them forever. Sweet, sad and solemn thoughts came into my mind. I was led by the scene, as I am sometimes led by plaintive music. Every grave had its history of a human life begun and ended. My life, long ago begun, might perhaps be already nearly ended. I confess that the thought was not without a certain delightful, and yet perhaps delusive, satisfaction. My hour's pilgrimage through the white marbles—too white and new in this fresh and new country to show yet a trace of moss or lichen—made death itself look fresh, new and agreeable. The sheep ran loose and nibbled about those unfenced graves. The flocks seemed familiar and welcome companions of the dead. At some of the mounds, perhaps, they represented more innocence than the guilty clay sleeping beneath. But, after all, innocence or guilt, in most of us, depends more on the measure of our temptation than on the measure of our virtue. Many a strong man is conquered and falls, while many a weak man escapes because unattacked. The more I look into my own heart, trembling at what I there see, the more charitable I grow towards the common infirmities of human nature. How morally sublime was Christ's word to the woman—"Neither do I condemn thee."

The graveyard contributed to my soul's contentment to-day. It set me at peace with all the world. Some little children walked past and I loved them at first sight. I saw a party of skaters cutting circles in the distance, and I rejoiced at their sport. Sombre, snow-bearing clouds came toiling up from the horizon, and I saluted them with welcome. Even the dry grass under my feet had something lovable in it. On the whole, I do not often achieve a happier morning; and yet my happiness came altogether from little things—indeed, things so little that, except for my having here idly pencilled them down to please your own heart by keeping it in communion with mine, I should hardly have held them fast in remembrance for half a day.

I still adhere to my resolution to do some act of kindness daily to some fellow creature. And I find that, thus far, all such acts have been of the category of these self-same little things. But they have given me happiness in the doing. And happiness is not a little, but a great thing. Now, the best part of happiness is love. Therefore let us continue to love one another unto the end. Thine immortally, THEODORE.

"A GREAT MISTAKE."

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 15, 1867.

MY DEAR PET: I have made a great mistake in permitting myself to be separated from you for three months. This absence from home, and particularly from yourself, is telling on me visibly. It is breeding a kind of demoralization in my faculties. True, I have my secret and contemplative hours,—my happy and profitable moods. But, during the greater part of all these long and toilsome days and nights, my soul is at ebb tide. There is something in your personal influence over my habits of thought which I sadly lack during this separation. I have an inward, dull pain of unintermitting longing for home—something, I suppose, like that which the soldiers felt in camp—an incurable disease. I feel it in my heart at this moment. Goodby. THEODORE.

"I DO NOT WISH YOUR ECONOMY TO PINCH YOUR DAILY PURSE."

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 16, 1867.

MY DARLING:— . . . Of course I wish you to economize as much as possible till I get rid of the burden of carrying a house on my back. But I do not wish your economy either to pinch your daily purse or to worry your daily peace. We have been, in many and various respects, so abundantly prospered in this life that we ought to be willing to bear our pecuniary difficulties with cheerfulness and patience. By and by I hope to work myself clear of all incumbrances. But, meanwhile, it is better to be contented than to be rich, and nobler to endure than to complain. Until I had roofed your head and carpeted your feet, I felt discontented with my lot and fortunes. But having performed a gentleman's duty of putting my wife in a pretty house, I shall endeavor to perform a Christian's duty of "Owing no man anything," and particularly that other part which consists in "Loving one another." Ever yours, THEODORE.

LOST LETTERS.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Jan. 30, 1867.

MY OTHER SELF: . . . There is something in the exchange of letters that ranks next to the greeting of palm to palm. When I receive one of your letters the sheet seems to contain more than you were writing; it is something which has been touched by your hand, which has caught a pulse of your feeling, and which represents more than the words can possibly say. I have always felt a little guilty after throwing away even an envelope on which you had written my name. Think, therefore, what a bankruptcy I suffered when I lost the packet of all your daily letters for six weeks! I lost them from my too great care: for I carried them in my pocket, which I could always reach, and would not trust them to my valise, which was not always under my eye. I had filed them carefully, put each in its order of date, interleaved them with the few letters which the children wrote, and kept the roll as sacred archives. I meant, on my return home, to put them in an iron safe and bequeath them to the children, to show to Florence's sons and daughters how much their grandfather and grandmother loved one another in the olden time. But those delightful manuscripts belong now to the lost literature of the world. Ever yours, THEODORE.

A "SUPREME MOMENT."

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 1, 1867.

O LOVING AND BELOVED: I have been pacing up and down the hall of a stone mansion during the twilight, indulging in high, solemn and devout thoughts. The dimness of the closing day was made doubly dark by the gloomy carpet, the black walnut stairways and the dusky-papered halls. Strains of sad music came floating back to my remembrance. Old scenes repainted themselves to my mind's eye. I looked backward and looked forward.

John Foster, wandering up and down the aisles of his chapel at Chichester by moonlight, was not more of a dreamer than I allowed myself to be during this one delicious, lonely and heartaching hour. It was a sad and sweet season. Almost every day brings me at least one "supreme moment." To-day, twilight was to-day's "supreme moment."

Sometimes I think of life at its true value. Selfishness falls away; ambition retires; love reigns, and peace fills my soul like a fountain. God knows whether or not my winter of meditation and of attempted improvement of my character has wrought out any other than an imaginary result. Sometimes I think I have advanced to a higher plane than before; then I am filled with doubt, and sometimes I am in the very dust. But at least one thing is certain—I hold myself to a higher ideal, and judge myself by a severer criticism than in the olden days. And yet I am conscious of departing more and more from the peculiar religious and theological views which you regard as sacred. Perhaps this statement may give you trouble; but certainly this fact has given me peace. Ever yours, THEODORE TILTON.

"ONCE A PRINCESS, NOW A QUEEN."

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 3, 1867.

MY DARLING OF DARLINGS: . . . It is a sweet delight to have a wife who interweaves herself into all her husband's highest and purest thoughts. I keep turning my soul towards yours day by day, and sometimes hour by hour; and I am sure that, if I could not write to you often and think of you oftener, I would grow cramped and barren in the highest realm of my thought. I sometimes call your name aloud, for the simple sake of hearing its sound. My love has grown young and boyish during this winter. I find in myself a conscious return to the ancient woods of our early courtship. I would like to have you for a companion this evening on a starlight walk, such as young lovers take. I keep bringing you before my mind, not as the mother and matron, but as the maiden and bride. And yet, on soberer reflection, you are sweeter, dearest, noblest to me as the ripe, rich-hearted woman, the mother of beautiful children and the wife of a gray-haired man! You were once a Princess; you are now a Queen. O! Elizabeth! the crown is on your head, and you don't know it. But the halo is plain enough to be seen by your loving worshipper, THEODORE TILTON.

"I LOVE YOU AS FERVENTLY AS ANY MAN EVER LOVED ANY WOMAN."

FLINT, Mich., Feb. 5, 1867.

MY QUEEN AND MISTRESS— . . . I was speaking of your letter. It is so full of your love that you have this day set yourself unconsciously before me in such noble proportions as to hide all the rest of the universe; and nothing, either in heaven above or earth beneath, seems at this moment so great, so pure, or so beautiful, as your own true wifely love for your unworthy husband. I am a hard subject for self-conquering, as you know. And this morning I could not get any honorable or manly mastery over myself, although I tried hard for the victory.

But, when your dear letter came, my soul took wings like a lark. "A word in season, how good it is." A little piece of white paper, with a loving woman's handwriting on it, changed the whole face of Nature and the whole temper of my spirit in a single moment. How powerful and how beneficent is the influence of love! And I now see, by the light of my winter's experience, that you have been profoundly right in demanding, not only a constant mutual love, but a constant mutual expression of it. Hereafter I shall judge the needs of your heart by the needs of mine, and be more prodigal in my daily outpouring of what has hitherto been too often unexpressed or half expressed. Sometimes we allow our loves simply to be taken for granted, whereas we should both enjoy each other's love the more by coining our own into a repeated confession of words. "Confession is good for the soul," says the proverb. And I hereby confess that I love you as fervently as any man ever loved any woman on the earth, or perhaps in the heavens.

Dearly beloved, God bless you forevermore! Yours, THEODORE.

"I DON'T BELIEVE IN ORTHODOXY."

ON THE CARS, CHICAGO TO MILWAUKEE, Tuesday, Feb. 12, 1867.

MY DARLING: . . . I am satisfied that whoso makes no intimate or confidential friends, both among men and among women—friends with whom he girdles himself round about as with a halo—friends who are props to keep him lifted perpetually toward his highest life—friends whose friendship is a kind of sacred wedding that knows no sex—such a man neglects one of the greatest opportunities for intellectual, moral and spiritual growth. . . .

The old religious teachings, the orthodox view, the dread of punishment, the atonement, have less and less power over my mind. Of course you will mourn over this. But I must be an honest man. I don't believe in orthodoxy, and therefore I will not pretend to do so. From you, as from God, I have no secrets; so I tell you day by day my thoughts. And these are my thoughts this morning. But the car is now growing crowded; a man has taken a seat at my elbow and I must stop writing. Blessings on your saintly head. Ever yours, THEODORE.

HOW WOULD JESUS HAVE APPEARED AS A MARRIED MAN?

OSHKOSH, Wis., Feb. 14, 1867.

MY DEAR ORTHODOX WIFE—I have been speculating considerably lately on the character and career of Jesus; and I wonder whether you will be shocked when I mention one of my meditations. It is this:—How would He have appeared in the character of a married man? Certainly, even to your reverential and adoring view of Him as "God manifest in the flesh," there ought to be nothing profane in the supposition. If He consented to be born of a woman, why might He not have consented to be married to a woman? And, if He was the son of an earthly parent, why might He not have been the Father of a mortal child? He loved some of His disciples better than others—as, for instance, John. He undoubtedly loved some few women devotedly, perhaps passionately. Now, why might He not have loved one, chief and chosen among these women, on whom He might have poured the whole fulness of His heart, and on whose finger He might have set a marriage ring, making her, indeed, like the Church, the "Bride of Christ?" I confess that if a new historic investigation should reveal the proof that Jesus was a married man, instead of an unmated lover of all the world, I would see an additional glory in the most wonderful of all historic characters. Nor do I know of any evidence to show that He was ever married.

If either Mary or Martha, or any other saintly woman, had been His wife, the fact would probably have been mentioned; and yet what would we have known of His friend Peter's wife except for the fact that her mother was once sick of a fever? Men's wives are not necessarily known to history. Of course, the probability is that Jesus was never married; yet this is by no means a certainty.

And, as there remains a possibility that He was, it is a pleasing reflection for me that, while He was living in Capernaum, in the house of Peter (one of His disciples), He might there have enjoyed also the still sweeter companionship of a wife of His own. I know that even Renan says, "Jesus never married." Even admitting the fact, however, this does not deny the propriety of His marrying, if He had chosen to marry.

But if Jesus had taken a wife and fathered a family I believe that this fact would have so completely humanized Him in the eyes of all the world that he never would have been regarded as God, or the Only-Begotten Son of God. And yet if, as the son of Mary, He had become the husband of a Galilean girl, and these twain had dwelt in a cottage by the Lake of Genesaret, and unto them had been born children like those of whom He said, "Suffer them to come unto me," let me inquire whether or not you would love the character of Jesus any less than you love it now? Answer. Your heterodox husband, THEODORE TILTON.

PEACE OF MIND.

MIDNIGHT, OSHKOSH, Wis., Feb. 14, 1867.

MY ABSENT PET: . . . I have almost ceased to fret at anything, to be displeased at anybody, to speak an ungentle word or to carry any daily trouble. Perhaps this sounds like a singular tale of self-satisfaction. I would not make such a statement to anybody but yourself. Nor do I count on any long continuance of this even and resigned temper. But at least I may enjoy it while it lasts, and may confess it to my wife's ear, that she, too, may enjoy it with her husband. Our minds might be made beautiful ministers of our daily happiness if only we had the skill and patience to handle our faculties well. The difference between high spiritual contentment and deep spiritual gloom is often a mere difference in the activity of the will. Resolving to be happy is itself half the victory over unhappiness. I could be miserably restless and discontented at this moment if I were to take away the curb with which I seek to bridle my spirit. I foresaw, some weeks ago, that I must either conquer myself or else be conquered, and ever since I have been fighting a battle of the giants. To-night I am in the enjoyment of a little victory. So I report it to headquarters. Good night. Yours, ever, THEODORE.

THE LITTLE CHILDREN.

RIPON, Wis., Feb. 15, 1867.

MY WIFE AND CHIEF FRIEND: . . . Your letter received this evening asks me this question, "Theodore, do you realize the depth and sacredness of my love for you?" Yes, my darling, I realize it fully; I realize it as never before in all my life. I realize it each day afresh, and with renewed gratitude to God for the gift of such a wife, of whom I am unworthy. I realize that it is not possible for any woman to love any man more than you love me. And I am humbled and rebuked by your strong and wonderful love. It daily chides me to a better life.

And now I ask, in return, Do you realize how supremely you are loved, and how sacredly you are reverenced, by your husband? I have often thought that it could not be in the character of any other human being on the face of the earth to excite mingled love and reverence so much as these feelings are excited by my dear wife. I count your love for me as the chief reward and pleasure of my life; and I repay it into your own bosom by an outpouring of all the wealth of my own heart's love for my own heart's mate.

This winter, to me, has been a season of many sweet and tender experiences. For instance, I have never before been so lovingly drawn to all the children I have met. But now the sight of a child, anywhere, thrills me with delight. This evening, for half an hour before my lecture, I held a sweet, sick, loving child in my arms, who looked up into my face with pure and perfect love.

Yesterday a little lame girl in the street almost made me weep. Mr. H——'s little daughter has several times come down before daylight in the morning, clad in her nightgown, to kiss me before my departure by the early train. I have had a good many children in my arms since I left Brooklyn. Alice asked, in one of her pretty notes, if I found any little children to comfort me in my absence. Tell her I find many—some of them very lovely—but none of them quite so dear as the three little chicks who live in Livingston street, and whose names I could name. The only little children to whom I have sent valentines are these same three little children of Livingston street. . . . Sitting by this study fire, at this midnight hour, the whole house asleep, and with only a ticking clock to keep me company, I feel myself drawn toward you with unutterable yearnings of love. The lamp light brightens my wedding ring, and makes it doubly golden against my finger. I hereby kiss the token, in sign of wedding you anew, now and forever. Amen. Yours lovingly, THEODORE.

MR. BEECHER'S "KIND ATTENTIONS" TO MRS. TILTON.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Feb. 21, 1867.

MY DARLING: . . . I am sorry to hear that Mr. Beecher had a poor house in Brooklyn. In view of his kind attentions to you this winter, all my old love for him has revived, and my heart would once more greet him as of old. I sometimes quarrel with my friends on the surface, but never at the bottom. With yourself, O friend above all friend! I am in perpetual love. Yours, THEODORE.

"A MUTUAL-ADMIRATION SOCIETY."

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Feb. 12, 1868.

MY DARLING—Though the hour is midnight I will not allow myself to go to bed till I have left a few lines to be mailed to you in the morning. Two of your letters came to me to-day, making me happy and rich. Every line of your handwriting seems like fine gold for preciousness. I have numbered your letters as David numbered Israel, and yet without David's sin in doing it.

This morning, on the train, I had them all out, and looked them all over once more. They are a little volume of dear, sweet, sacred writings. I fear that my responses are not worthy of them. You seem to be in a mood of overflowing affection, confidence, pride and rejoicing, on account of your husband. Well, so am I on account of my wife. We certainly are a Mutual-Admiration Society. My prevailing feeling toward you of late has been, you are the chief prop and pillar of my life. You never were so needful to me, and never so helpful to me as now. I not only think of you, but rely upon you and live for you constantly. I have great peace. We brushed away all clouds on that storm-dispelling night. I trust they have gone forever. Certainly I have ever since been a cheery, good hearted, hopeful and bright man. Sometimes you show yourself to me as so large, generous, strong and devout a character, that I am uplifted for a month by the very contagion of it. If I had come away from home in a low, instead of a high, state of mind, this night would not have found me so surrounded as I am with something brighter than the day itself. I am lonesome, but not sad; I yearn for you, and yet am cheerful; I think of you longingly, and yet am content to be writing to you, out of sight and far away.

"Come and abide with me for ever." Yours faithfully, THEODORE.

A HOME SCENE.

LINCOLN, Ill., Feb. 13, 1868.

MY SWEET WIFE: . . . Peace be with you all! The little, trifling facts mentioned in the children's notes were enough to bring all the home scenes—dolls, baby rags and all—visibly to my mind. I could see Cad sitting with his Grandma, in ignorance of the Noah's Ark awaiting him at home; Alice playing pranks with little Miss B——, dressed as a man; Florence, with her sedate head, meditating on her new knife; and Paul with his toes held out to be named at the fire. . . . With kisses all around, I am, affectionately yours, THEODORE TILTON.

"A TONIC TO MY WHOLE SYSTEM."

CLINTON, Ia., Feb. 20, 1868.

PET: Heigho! Five of your letters have just come to me all in a bunch! "Here's richness!" They have put me into such a merry humor that my blood has been laughing up and down my veins. They made an actual handful—nay, more than that, a heartful.

. . . How I would like to be at home to-day! Or else, how I would like to see you here! The weather is warm enough for grass to grow, birds to build and hearts to love. You ask me if I like to read the reiteration of your love. Yes, my darling! Every bird loves to hear his mate sing. Your love for me, as expressed in your letters, is my chief joy and rejoicing in this world. It makes life seem a braver thing to me. It makes my journeys nothing but trifles, and my hardships a bagatelle. It puts vigor into my step, and joy into my work. I look round at my fellow travellers in the cars and my co-workers everywhere, and ask myself, "I wonder if these people have as much spring and motive for work as I now have?" The thought of giving you a home free and clear of debt is a tonic to my whole system. I am somewhat wearied, thin and pale, but never was so cheering in all my life, never so free from fretfulness, never so thankful for my prosperity, and never so happy in my love for wife and children. This makes a man of me day by day. . . .

Give the chicks my dearest love and a kiss all round. Faithfully yours, THEODORE.

BENEFITING HER AND THE CHILDREN.

DECORAH, Ia, March 1, 1868.

MY DEAR WIFE: . . . I have been looking at my little collection of home photographs and wishing that I could to-night see the real faces. How precious you all seem! My heart grows big when I think of one and another of my family. What a wife and what children God has given me! Truly I am blessed as few men are. To-night I am grateful that my labors, travel and absence all go to benefit you and the dear children. This thought, whenever it fully takes possession of my mind, turns my daily burden into a gossamer. My whole heart is filled with love imperishable, and so I laugh at my trials and welcome my cares. Ever since Mrs. G——'s misfortunes were made known to me, I have been seriously anxious to place you out of the reach of any similar arrow of bitterness. How that woman's heart must daily suffer a new death! I cannot but think that her necessitous situation (for which there seems hardly to be a sufficient excuse) must irresistibly cast a shadow over her remembrances of her husband. Mr. G—— once told me that he was worth a million of dollars! Now his wife is a beggar! What a world this is for doing and undoing—for crowning and discrowning! "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." . . . Lovingly and longingly, THEODORE.

HIS AND HER EXTRAVAGANCE.

AKRON, Ohio, Jan. 15, 1869.

MY DEAR WIFE—Ever since last October I have been lecturing every week, sometimes every night, and the proceeds have been all swallowed up in my extravagant debts. If this spendthrift tendency of mine is ever to be curbed it must be by your helpful criticism of it, not by a parallel liberality of outlay by yourself. I am putting myself daily to as much fatigue as human nature can endure, in order, if possible, to clear off my obligations to my creditors, and to keep afterward abreast with the world. Your letter, a few days ago, stating that you could not live on your salary, made me sick at heart, and temporarily I felt like giving up my journey and going home. To-day you send me a bill of $58 for Cad's clothes, an amount which I regard as so great for a family of our resources as to be almost as wicked as my own outlays for pictures. In all the three weeks of my last absence I have not made, above expenses, $400. Not one penny of all my lecture earnings for years has ever gone into a bank. I look upon our money-spending tendencies as cruelly wrong. At this moment I am well nigh broken down in voice, and know not how I shall get through with to-night's lecture. Am I wrong when I say that I cannot look with equanimity on squandering so much money on fine dresses for the children? My heart suffers a pang in saying this, but I cannot help saying it. We must either sell our establishment in Brooklyn or else manage it on a less expensive scale. I have made a vow to buy not another picture, and not another unnecessary article, during the present year. It is with something like a shudder that I look forward to the prolonged slavery of public lecturing every winter; and, if the proceeds are to be freely thrown away by both of us, I may as well stop it now. I have suffered for ten days past an agony of remorse at the fruitless exertions I have made by three years of speaking—fruitless because their harvest has been unprofitably spent. Judging by all the families I visit, I know that we are literally throwing away our inheritance. At last I am aroused; and I appeal to you to put a peremptory check upon any and every unnecessary expenditure which you see me make. Dress the children in calico for a year, and let me get out of my misery. Yours in dust and ashes, THEODORE TILTON.

"NEW YORK LEISURELY COMPARED WITH CHICAGO"—A HOPE OF "MARRYING AGAIN."

ALTON, Ill., Dec. 21, 1866.

MY DARLING: I am growing very familiar with the Mississippi River. It has become a companion and friend. Out of the window of my hotel I look upon it to-day—broad, ice-covered, ridged with low banks, and gleaming in the sun. This has been a spring-like day. One of my neighbors, an old lady in the opposite house, has opened her windows to give a breath of the sunshiny air to her household plants. The ice is melting and running like a brook in the streets. A pleasure boat like mine (when I had one) is sailing in the open channel of the river, between the cakes of ice. But O the mud in the thoroughfares! You never saw such mud in your life at home. Small dogs get drowned in it. I believe that the flatboats sometimes float in it. This city has visibly grown and intensified since I spoke here about two years ago. All the large Western cities are wonderfully wide-awake, active, busy and hurried. New York is leisurely compared with Chicago. And Brooklyn? Such a city does not exist in the West.

I have walked round town a good deal, bought two little picture cards for the children, sat for my photograph, grumbled a little at receiving no letter from home, but finally have shoved my table near enough to the window to look out upon the glorious river, in the hope that my peace shall be like unto it, according to the promise. The warm, half-summer air created in me a kind of lassitude, and I feel in a languishing mood, rather homesick and a little melancholy. And yet a gentleman was in my room a few moments ago who asked me if I do not enjoy hugely my lecturing engagements and the consequent sight-seeing. Truly, "Every heart knoweth its own bitterness, and a stranger intermeddleth not with its joy."

Feeling unusually weary to-day I brought up your accidental mention that you had lately fainted. My darling, I have always noticed that when I have been absent from home for a considerable period I return to find you degenerated in health. Be less disturbed in your mind. It is your spirit that wearies your flesh. You have a great soul in a small frame. Sitting up late is not to be pardoned by your too indulgent husband. But when you are weak and weary, I hope that, as unto St. Bernard in his exhaustion, many more of the ministering angels will guide you daily round about.

This afternoon I crossed the presence of an angel—my own sweet angel of flesh and blood, with black eyes and pretty curls. I was lying on the sofa, trying to make believe I was in my own house, and that you were coming up stairs in a few minutes to read to me from the "Pilgrim's Progress." But no, you stayed away. Are you not coming to Chicago? Don't say no. Get Ellen Deavis to keep house for you, and come and join me. To judge from your letters, you will not be any more wearied by the travel than you are with the house and its loneliness. I do not abandon the hope of marrying you again next January. Ever your own, THEODORE TILTON.

DAYS IN DARKNESS.

TUESDAY, March 18, 1867. OSWEGO, N. Y.

MY DEAR WIFE: . . . But I cannot thus afford to be led away captive of gloominess and bad blood. I must endeavor more completely to conquer myself in future. "Greater is he who ruleth his own spirit than he who taketh a city." Despondency is my lurking enemy. It lies in wait for me in my most familiar haunts. And it most often entraps me under my own roof.

But I think my two or three recent days in darkness have been, on the whole, a moral benefit, in that they have revealed to my mind its most easily temptable points. It was good for the Pilgrims to go into Valley of the Shadow of Death. "No chastening for the present is joyous, but generous; nevertheless afterwards it worketh out the peaceable fruits of righteousness."

So, after my overthrow, I rise again well out of the dust, and rebegin the battle of self-conquests—to be again, I doubt not, defeated a thousand times. Well, during all the winter I was as one clothed in King's apparel; and it is now high time, therefore, that I should, for a little while, wear beggar's rags. The soul's life must have its needful changes from joy to sorrow. I came home from the West respecting myself too highly. My crown then was suddenly taken off and cast to the earth. I am now dispossessed of my portion, and wander like an exile banished from my former complacent self. But, oh, happy misfortune! that carries a man first into miserable wretchedness in order that it may then carry him, like the prodigal, back to his father's house.

As Luther thanked God for his sins, so I, too, can thank God for my sorrowful glooms.

Be assured that, whatever happens, whether clouds or clear skies, I love you boundlessly and forever. THEODORE.

RETROSPECTION.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 21, 1867.

MY DEAR PET: I am, at this midnight hour, in the same hotel, and in the same room, wherein you and I were quartered eleven and a half years ago, on our wedding tour! What a history these years unfold to our backward gaze! Gray hairs have stolen upon us since then. Time and care have jointly wrinkled our brows. Joys and sorrows have checkered our path. Four children have been given to us on earth, and one of these has been taken back to Heaven. You have had sickness, and I have had toil. Both of us may now look back to that wedding pilgrimage, and smile at how little we then knew of human life! Thank God, the conquerors of ourselves we are, nevertheless, nearer the victory now than then. I would not exchange the present for the past! With what self-complacency I looked upon my life in those "green and salad days!" How strong I thought myself for the battle! The revelations of later years subdue a man's pride by teaching him his weakness. At this retrospective moment, in this charmed chamber, I am humble, sad and calm. Life is sober as I now look upon it. Death is near, as I now think of it. Heaven is sweet, as I now wait for it. I have not made the best, or even a good use of my last ten years. I have less faith in my moral integrity now than at any former period of my life. It is hard to live well. Nevertheless, my dear pet, we will try again to realize more perfectly our ideals. May God bless us both, now and ever. Amen! Yours, THEODORE.

"QUITE MERRY-HEARTED."

KEENARD HOUSE, CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 4, 1868.

MY DEARLY BELOVED WIFE: . . . I am quite merry-hearted. Low spirits have not come near me for a week. The fact that I am doing something for the enrichment of my family is a great joy to me. I bound up and down like an India rubber ball!

Good afternoon! Lovingly yours, THEODORE.

"THE CHIEF RULING INFLUENCE OF MY LIFE."

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., SUNDAY MORNING, Feb. 9, 1868.

MY DEAR ANGEL: I dreamed of you all last night and awoke thinking of you this morning. How much I want to see you! How I yearn after you! How my soul blesses you day by day! I can never describe how precious your love of your husband has appeared to him during these few weeks past. Your singleness, your fervor, your purity, your devotion—they fill my mind and heart with reverence, adoration and humility.

I regard my last evening spent with you at home as the most memorable point in my whole life. You opened for me, that night, the gate of Heaven, which had so long seemed shut.

Ever since I have had nothing but glory, thanksgiving and praise. If ever a man was made a new creature that man was I—no more despondency, no more repining, no more vain regrets, no more loss of self-respect, no more grovelling in the dust. On the contrary, I am once again a man among men and a Christian among Christians. Now, this transformation I owe to yourself, to your irrepressible love and devotion, to your ceaseless prayers and to your victorious faith.

You always have it in your power either to crown or to dethrone me. You have the chief ruling influence of my life. Your words, your wishes, your looks, your thoughts, act on me like magic. When I am doing you any injury, or slight, or hardness, I am made so miserable that I do not wish to live. When I am making you happy I walk like a prince newly come into his kingdom.

Your letters, since I have been from home this last time, have been the dearest you ever penned. They are royal in their love. Each one fills me with renewed pride and joy in my wife. Oh, my darling, in comparison with such love as you express, how poor is the friendship of all other friends! I have never seen any one who loves as you do. You have the richest of all human hearts. I am pledged to you forever. My vows I shall keep and not break. With God's help and with yours, I shall be the faithfullest man in the world. Blessings on your soul, this Sabbath day. Ever yours, THEODORE.

A HOME SCENE.

LINCOLN, Ill., Feb. 13, 1868.

MY SWEET WIFE: . . . Peace be with you all! The little, trifling facts mentioned in the children's notes were enough to bring all the home scenes—dolls, baby rags, and all—visibly in my mind. I could see Cad sitting with his Grandma, in ignorance of the Noah's Ark awaiting him at home; Alice playing pranks with little Miss B——, dressed as a man; Florence, with her sedate head, meditating on her new knife; and Paul with his toes held out to be named at the fire. . . . With kisses all around, I am affectionately yours, THEODORE TILTON.

"A TONIC TO MY WHOLE SYSTEM."

CLINTON, Ia., Feb. 20, 1868.

PET: Heigho! Five of your letters have just come to me, all in a bunch! "Here's richness!" They have put me into such a merry humor that my blood has been laughing up and down my veins. They make an actual handful—nay, more than that, a heartful.

. . . How I would like to be at home to-day! Or else, how I would like to see you here! The weather is warm enough for grass to grow birds to build and hearts to love. You ask me if I like to read the reiteration of your love. Yes, my darling! Every bird loves to hear his mate sing. Your love for me, as expressed in your letters, is my chief joy and rejoicing in this world. It makes life seem a braver thing to me. It makes my journeys nothing but trifles and my hardships a bagatelle. It puts vigor into my step and joy into my work. I look round at my fellow travellers in the cars and my coworkers everywhere and ask myself, "I wonder if these people have as much spring and motive for work as I now have?" The thought of giving you a home, free and clear of debt, is a tonic to my whole system. I am somewhat wearied, thin and pale, but never was so cheering in all my life, never so free from fretfulness, never so thankful for my prosperity, and never so happy in my love for wife and children. This makes a man of me day by day.

Give the chicks my dearest love and a kiss all round. Faithfully yours, THEODORE.

"IN A HEARTBREAK."

EMPIRE HOUSE, AKRON, O., Jan. 15, 1869.

MY DEAR WIFE: I am in a heartbreak—yes, I have been on my knees in this chamber, crying more bitterly than any child. Two years ago, in this same spot, I had a terrible wrestling with my soul. The moment I entered the room to-day the old experience was revived. Since that occasion—which I can never lose out of my memory—I seem to have suffered much and profited little. My life looks very much like a waste—a blank—a blight. Of all the past I thought to-day that I had saved nothing but Paul—and him, too, I have lost. The little key in my pocket seems not to bring him nearer, but to keep him farther away. All the afternoon I have been weeping, trembling and agonizing. I am well nigh sick with very grief, saying, "Little Paul, come and help your father!" My life seems utterly wretched and unworthy. I cannot bear to look in upon myself. I wrote to you about our failure to live within our means; but this shortcoming is nothing to what I feel in myself of moral truthlessness. It seems to me as if I were a spiritual castaway. I ought not to trouble you with these disclosures; but, if I do not utter them to you they must go unuttered. Your own confessions seem to indicate that you are in a perpetual trouble. Ah! the morning of life is rosy, but the noon is sometimes leaden and gray.

I make a great many rebeginnings, but do not get along far before I lose the little that I have gained. You ask for "glimpses in my heart." It is a dark place to look into. God help your sorrowful and groaning husband! Yours affectionately, THEODORE.

THE BEST AND TRUEST WOMAN.

MATTOON, Ill., March 4, 1869.

MY DARLING: . . . Your last night's letter was full of love, and I drank your tender words like a mine of comfort. My chief title to self-respect is, that I have won and kept the unblemished love of the best and truest woman whom I have ever known. Why you should love me so heartily, so entirely, and so devotedly I see nothing in myself to deserve. My first thought on waking this morning was, How few men ever know what it is to be loved so purely, so deeply, so passionately and so sacredly as I am loved by my ever-loving wife.

I hope that my remaining life on the earth (whether short or long) will exhibit to you a daily proof that this beautiful affection is reverently returned. . . . Ever yours, THEODORE.

"THE MOST WRETCHED SUMMER OF MY LIFE."

SATURDAY NIGHT, BROOKLYN, August 28, 1869.

MY DEAR WIFE: . . . I will confess frankly that I have passed the most wretched summer of my life, and no one knows it but myself; indeed, no one who has been with me has seen me other than outwardly gay and cheerful. All the exhibitions which I have made of myself to my friends have been of unusual hilarity. This has been the utmost shallowness of superficiality. One thing I have enjoyed—that is, my work. It has been unusually heavy, and, therefore, unusually beneficent. But, leaving my work aside, all my other pleasures have been pains. For two or three weeks I resolutely repressed all allusions to my feelings when writing to you, not wishing to mar your vacation. But, as the time of your home-coming cannot be very far off, I open the flood-gates to-night. I will, therefore, say that I have missed you for the past month with something of the same awfulness and heartbreak as if I had lost you forever by death.

. . . But I have discovered, by searching my soul, that I love you more than any human ought to love another. I have seen some noble women this summer, whom I admire, and whom, in a certain way, I love. All my life I have known something of the nature and experience of true friendship.

From my early years I have loved, and loved you. But all the past experiences of my heart's affections have been as nothing compared with the unusual and solemn sense which I have had, during all the hilarities of this Newport week, that the only human being who touches my highest nature is yourself. This being the case, I am filled with distress to think that I must keep you uninformed, for the sake of your own tranquility, of many of my thoughts.

I would to God I were a man worthy of your goodness, your self-denial and your singleness of heart. Occasionally, in some supreme hour, I am your fit mate; but, at all other hours, you are high above me. But, if you know the inward reverence which I have borne toward you for many days past, even while appearing to be absorbed in the companionship of other ladies and particularly at Newport, I am sure you would almost dread to be so much loved by any human (and therefore infirm and wayward) creature like myself.

I have several times tried to keep myself from writing you any such letter as this, because it is unlike most of my past correspondence. It is my request that no other eye shall ever see it except your own. Indeed, after this letter is in the mail, I shall probably grieve to think I wrote it. But, on the other hand, I shall never feel content until I have in some measure confessed to you that, all summer long, I have trembled at the thought that you are almost as much to me as God Himself, and yet that I am constantly treating you as ungratefully as I treat Him. Yours, in frankness, THEODORE.

Religious Liberty Found Only in English Speaking Nations.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The remark made in my last letter, that there existed liberty for the Church nowhere outside of the English-speaking world, affirms a fact which deserves something more than a casual observation. The very spectacle, too, of what is passing at this moment in Spain and Italy, in Germany and in England, forces this question of the perfect or comparative freedom of the Catholic Church among the English race and her oppression by Latin or Celto-Latin races, as a phenomenon and a puzzle, upon the attention of unlearned and learned alike.

Can this strange phenomenon be explained rationally? Can this historical and social puzzle be made clear to the mind of a child? It might appear presumptuous to answer in the affirmative. At any rate, it may be praiseworthy to make an honest attempt at solving this difficulty.

In the HERALD of the 13th inst. is described the proceedings of a discussion in the British House of Commons, on a motion of Mr. Newdegate to obtain official information of the growth of religious orders in various countries of continental Europe. The purpose of the mover, it is well known, was to show that the liberty accorded to Roman Catholic institutions everywhere in Europe resulted in such rapid increase of monkish and conventual establishments, and so aggressive an attitude taken in consequence by the Church toward the State, that Russia and Germany only followed the example of Spain and France and Italy in either adopting rigorous measures of repression or in suppressing religious orders altogether, and subjecting the Church and her ministrations to the magistrate. The amendments suggested by Mr. Newdegate's opponents proposed, on the other hand, to extend this official inquiry to the United States and Canada, in order to demonstrate that the full liberty accorded to all religions to develop their institutions in accordance with the common law was neither detrimental to the public tranquillity nor dangerous to the best interests of freedom.

The hostility of Mr. Newdegate is based upon this conviction (an honest one, we are bound to believe), that the countries accounted Catholic until now have been taught by experience to look upon the Church as the enemy of the State, and upon her institutions as the natural and irreconcilable adversaries of legitimate national authority and public freedom. Else, why in every single nation cradled, reared and educated up to maturity by the Catholic Church does it happen that the nation at its majority, and once put in possession of its liberty, makes the first use of it by abridging the liberty of the Church, its foster mother?

This was the very position taken by Mr. Newdegate in the spring of 1865, in an elaborate speech of more than two hours, in opposition to a bill brought into the House of Commons by Mr. Monsell (now Lord Monsell, of Emley) for the repeal of the test oath imposed on Roman Catholics and Dissenters.

He wished to show, from the experience and practice of all countries once Catholic, that the same danger which they met by repression or total suppression, existed in England from the growth of Catholicism, and ought to be met by the same preventive remedies. At that time, though the unification of Germany was spoken of, and the phantom of a "United Germany" loomed distantly up to the vision of the prophetic few, nevertheless not one ever dreamed that the gigantic reality, like the Ghoul in Eastern story, should soon arise from Bismarck's enchanted pot.

The then King of Prussia and his right royal son and family—it is no secret—considered their Catholic subjects as the firmest props of their throne and State. The King was strongly conservative at his accession, and feared and distrusted the radicals, while Bismarck shared or seemed to share his aversion to the latter and his confidence in the former. Nor, I venture to say it, are the sentiments of the Emperor of to-day at bottom much different from those of the King of yesterday. The only difference is that King William was his own master, while Emperor William is Bismarck's man. And the change in Bismarck's policy is—for conscience and truth he has none—that he needs the support of the radicals and North German Lutherans to set afloat his new German Empire, and that support he secures by persecution of the Catholics. Only wait a little and you will see a pretty row among the crew! But of this enough has been said in a former letter.

At any rate the sudden change in the policy of the Prussian government from openly avowed favor to the most unsparing hostility, is a further argument for Mr. Newdegate, and one more fact forced into his generalization.

The subject, then, is one of actual, living and surpassing interest, claiming the attention of the British Parliament at this very hour. Apparently, however, English statesmen have no special sympathy for Mr. Newdegate's besetting hypochondria, and are far from sharing his apprehensions from the rapid growth of Catholicism on the free soil of Great Britain. It is also a living subject for us here in America. For a portion of the Protestant press is still clamorous for repressive laws against the growth of conventual establishments in our midst; and they have at their command the same arguments enlisted in his cause by Mr. Newdegate, the persecutions which the Church suffers in almost every part of Spanish and Portuguese America.

What, then, are the elements of truth which underly the logic or fanaticism of the member for North Warwick, and on what is based the confidence of the men, Protestant and Catholic alike, who deride his fears, and, session after session, defeat his motions of inquiry into conventual monstrosities?

There is, in support of the prejudice under which Newdegate labors, this fact, that up to the year 1520 the religious authority of Rome was acknowledged in every country of Western Europe. I say the authority of the Roman Catholic Church and her Pontiff "was acknowledged;" I do not say it was "paramount." It was not. But its bishops claimed for it as an essential right that it should be acknowledged as paramount; whereas in most countries the Church had existed for centuries in constant and humiliating subjection to the State. It was so in France, where what is called the Magna Charta of "Gallican liberties," the Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges (1438), was a charter of real servitude for the Church. Leo X., in 1517, when he promulgated the concordat with Francis I. repealing the Pragmatic Sanction, thought he had taken a secular yoke from off the necks of the French clergy; but, in practice, French legislation became more oppressive, the King had the absolute control of all ecclesiastical dignities and benefices and the concordat remained a dead letter.

It was equally so in Spain. For in proportion as Ferdinand and Isabella withdrew from the Holy See the legitimate and necessary control over the Spanish hierarchy and all religious institutions within the Spanish territories, just in the same measure did the royal authority assume itself that control. The very inquisition, to which popular opinion attributes the death of liberty and religion in Spain, became baneful in the same degree that it ceased to be guided by the justice and mercy which canon law made imperative in all tribunals connected even indirectly with the Church. It became at length exclusively a State tribunal, crushing thenceforth with the same relentless cruelty the poor Moriscoes and the Cardinal Archbishop of Toledo in spite of the remonstrances and threats of Rome and the censures inflicted by the canons. It was still more so in Portugal till the day that Ignatius Loyola had the courage to tell King John V. that no member of his order should have any connection with the Inquisition, and that the labors of his sons were to consist in instructing the Christian people by assiduous teaching and the examples of a holy life, and not by the terrors of sanguinary executions.

Strange to say, in Italy itself, as you approached Rome you found that the Inquisition lost its terrors and that the reign of mercy was more sensibly felt, till in the city of the Common Father of Christendom you could learn that not one capital execution for religion's sake had ever taken place.

It was an irreparable misfortune that Church and State should have been so allied as to make the former the slave in most Catholic countries, and to make the alliance so close that, while the Church herself was bound hand and foot, she was made to bear, by the very fact of this monstrous union, all the odium due to the oppressive use of secular authority.

Even now not only the generality of Protestant readers of history, but Catholics themselves, hold the Church responsible for the errors and crimes of the secular power, which oppressed under pretext of protecting her. It is this enforced but de facto union of the Church with the State in Spain, in France, in Austria and Italy which is one main cause of the popular hatred displayed toward Catholicism at the breaking out of any revolution. Unfortunately, when the religious troubles consequent upon the Reformation frightened all Christendom the Church looked to princes and sovereigns to protect her threatened rights or stay the progress of the new opinions. The dependence of the religious upon the secular authority thus became at that time both necessary and absolute; the subordination of the spiritual to the temporal became more complete; the union of Church and State became more intimate.

It is not to be denied that the Reformers everywhere identified their own religious opinions with the cause of liberty. Freedom of thought and belief became, wherever Protestantism prevailed, identified with political freedom. To oppose the spread of free inquiry was to oppose the Gospel, and to do either was to be the enemy of the human race. Such was the attitude forced upon the Catholic Church by the Reformers; such the public opinion which they formed in their day and has been growing ever since.

Add to this that when the French Revolution broke out the Church in France was held responsible and made to suffer for the crimes of royalty. The civil constitution of the clergy imposed on the Church of France by the National Convention was condemned by the Holy See and rejected unanimously by the French prelates. They were thus put in opposition to the more moderate revolutionists. Later came Robespierre and the suppression of all worship, and the republican armies carried with them to Spain, Italy and Germany the hatred of the Catholic priest as the born foe of freedom; and a hatred all the more intense because these men had so deeply imbued their hands at home in the blood of bishops and priests.

Now, it is certain that revolutionary France at that period exercised by its armies, as well as by its literature, a most successful propaganda of revolutionism and hatred of Catholicity, which leavened every country over which these armies spread. The revolutionary and republican clubs that Napoleon Bonaparte and his generals founded everywhere in Italy were the parents of the later Carbonari, Mazzinians and Garibaldians. Blind hatred of Catholicism became their only religion. Thus grew up in Italy an anti-Catholic public opinion, which grew, spread and deepened until it pervaded the entire mass of the population. The Church and her priesthood and religious orders were an army organized against freedom. There could be no liberty until they were beaten down.

In Germany, although the French armies were beaten back in utter rout in 1812 and 1813, French ideas remained like a fortified camp in a conquered country, and these ideas have grown and spread even deeper and wider, until, in union with Protestantism, they found themselves powerful enough to strike down the Catholic Church in Germany, to banish her religious orders and imprison her bishops, under the transparent pretext of their being the foes of the "new Protestant Empire of Germany." Is not this the story in France? Voltairians, revolutionists, republicans, Communists, internationalists—do they not all unite against the Catholic Church as the common foe? Such is the public opinion which has been growing for a century, and will continue to grow there until the present generation sees a more fearful revolution than the first, and the horrors of 1871 in Paris are repeated all over France.

Italy is only in the first stage of her anti-Catholic and anti-social fever. There are young men who will see before they are sixty the very name of religion a hissing and a curse in that peninsula.

Read in the light of this "public opinion," derived, as I have sketched it, from the solidarity of Church and State, and the union of radicalism and Protestantism, what is now happening in Brazil and Mexico and elsewhere?

There is one lesson which God is compelling our generation to read, and it is this—that His Church needs only freedom, the free air of heaven and the sunlight vouchsafed to all, to prosper and bless the land. That freedom the Anglo-Saxon race give her and God prosper and increase them for it. That same freedom the Germanic races shall also give her ere long; for they love liberty too well not to give it to all, and the present delusion shall soon pass away. PRUDENTIUS.

No New Churches, but a Return to the Old Church Demanded.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In the HERALD of July 30 you intimate that "In a free country like America, every tax-paying citizen may start a new religion when he pleases," and that instead of one Plymouth church on Brooklyn Heights three Plymouth churches would not be too many for the enlightenment of mankind. Over the shortcomings of Beecher, the Tiltons and other members of the house of the Lord known as Plymouth church let us throw the mantle of charity. They are not the only ones to whom the finger may be pointed reproachfully. Christianity, with its modern improvements—whether its centre be at the Vatican or at the dioceses of the many subdivisions of Protestantism—cloaks and covers many an offence as grievous as that now charged against some of the saints of Plymouth church. There is never an effect without a cause, and before we avail ourselves of our imprescriptible right as a "tax-paying citizen to start a new religion," let us compare the Christianity of 1,850 years ago with the Christianity of A. D. 1874 and its modern improvements.

There being any amount of controversy respecting what Christ did say and do, many of the numerous translators and commentators being ignorant egotists and bigoted fanatics, distorting and mutilating many of the sayings and doings of the Nazarene, we, in order not to be misled, will go back as far as practicable to original records and do our own translating, giving to each word its true value and meaning, in order to be able to fully appreciate the character of Christ and comprehend the philosophy of his teachings. In Him were personified humility, charity, truth, patience and brotherly love. He merely claimed to be the Son of God in the same manner as His brethren; for all men in those days were called the sons of God. At times He called himself the Son of Man; but by Him His hearers were generally saluted by the title of brethren. The duty of His life was to promulgate the truth; for by the knowledge of the truth mankind would be saved. His followers called Him a Saviour, because His sublime teachings saved them from the effects of their ignorance and taught them to control the weaknesses and follies inherent in mankind.

The doctrines He and His disciples taught were simple and pure; their sermons were short and devoid of rhetorical flourishes. No gorgeous temples with frescoed walls, richly cushioned seats, brilliant and resplendent lights, high, towering altars breathing forth sweetly perfumed incense; no strains of sense inspiring music reached the ears or mingled with the rustic voices of Christ and His disciples as they earnestly taught the people that the law and the prophets consisted merely in doing unto others as you would have them do unto you. For many years it was in the huts of the poor, in the open air and in the houses of each other, that these pure and good people assembled to commune among themselves, believing in their simplicity that the temple the most acceptable to the Deity is the human heart. Teachers and followers all earned their bread by the sweat of their brows, animated by a sentiment, which possibly may not be understood in this materialistic age (for now the priesthood is well paid for preaching the word of God), that the truth as taught by the carpenter's son was too precious to be bought and sold, but should be freely given as it was freely received. These men lived at a time when the splendor, luxury and sumptuousness of the Roman Empire surpassed in magnificence the display of the most powerful empire of modern times. They were surrounded by the immense and beautiful architectural piles, with their gorgeous decorations, erected in honor of the Pagan gods; still these sturdy and modest primitive Christians remained uninfluenced and uncontaminated by their surroundings, a living and burning protest against the vanity and follies of their day.

The above I find to be an impartial analysis of Christ's life, teachings and practices, and a faithful statement of the condition of the primitive Christians.

Rather than start a new Church, why do we not make an effort to re-establish the old one? You have here a synopsis of its principles. If these principles do not attain your ideas of piety, perhaps you or some of your readers can furnish something better. Jesuitism, Beecherism, licentiousness, rascality, the love of money, the love of display, vanity and pride are fast destroying what we once called the Church. We cherish the hope that something better and purer will be erected on its ruins. We no longer respect the clergy, for we cannot consider them as a class of men who earn their bread by honest toil. It is to the press—the great missionary of the age—that we look for aid. Your voice reaches the remotest corners of the earth. It is your duty to denounce hypocrisy and promulgate the truth. Your opportunities for good or evil are great; but remember, your responsibilities are still greater. LE MEME.

Academy of Mount St. Joseph.

Two years ago, when Bishop McFarland removed from Providence to the city of Hartford, it was found that the accommodations of the Sisters of Mercy's Academy were too limited to supply the demand that pupils were making upon the community, so well known for its success in the cause of education. The Bishop, seeing the growing desire on the part of his people to educate their daughters at or near home, resolved to erect an institute in this episcopal city which would for years be able to supply the wants of the young ladies of his diocese who seek a first class education, and who would be at the same time more immediately under the watchful care of their Bishop, the guardian and director of this institute. The site purchased for the educational establishment covers an area of nearly four acres of land. It is situated on the finest avenue in Hartford, and, though standing almost in the centre of the city, possesses, on account of its extensive grounds and peculiar surroundings, all the privacy and seclusion of a country home. It is located on Lord's Hill, where the wealthiest of our citizens live and where the beauty of their dwellings, with their surroundings, have made the locality the handsomest in the State. Hartford is the most central city of Connecticut, and, on account of its railroad facilities, enterprise and beauty has of late been made by the vote of the people of the State, their capital city. It is for all the Eastern States quite a railroad centre, and within the past few years has been linked to the great West by direct railroad connections. A year ago plans were furnished for the institution by one of our best known architects, who says that Hartford can now boast not only of having the largest but the most solid and strictly architectural academy in New England. It is complete in all its departments. The class rooms, dormitories and study halls are spacious and well ventilated. Water from the city reservoir is conducted to all parts of the institution, and on the ground are four springs of purest drinking water. The building is heated throughout by steam, and possesses all the modern improvements and accommodations so necessary for the pleasure, comfort and health of the pupils. It is the intention of the Sisters of Mercy to make this the leading Catholic academy in New England, for as nothing has been spared to secure a large and well furnished establishment, in like manner nothing shall be wanting to impart to the pupils that solid and refined education which will fit them for every walk in life. We would ask all who wish for their daughters a thorough moral and intellectual education at a moderate outlay to inquire more particularly about this institution.

It has been reported that Dr. Porteous' congregation in Brooklyn had dwindled down to a handful, but the writer found the Elm place Congregational church building crowded last Sunday night with a most attentive and devout audience, so that camp stools were placed along the aisles. SANCTITY ENCAMPED.

Opening of the Annual Worship at Ocean Grove.

CHINCOTEAGUE

Religious Revival in an Island Morally Benighted.

Methodist Episcopal Demonstrations in Maine.

OCEAN GROVE.

OCEAN GROVE, August 14, 1874.

The skies were heavily overcast this morning, a strong gale was blowing from the northeast, with every indication that, before night, a regular old-fashioned roaring nor'easter of two or three days' duration would set in, lining the seacoast with wrecks, driving sojourners in the country back to their city homes by thousands, and carrying dismay and discouragement even into the Methodist camp meetings from Maine to Georgia. Nevertheless, in coming down here from Long Branch, after an early breakfast, we found the road, for the whole distance of seven miles from the railway station, lined with stages and carriages bound for or coming from Ocean Grove, and on reaching these combined Methodist summer settlements of Ocean Grove and Asbury Park we were ushered into a scene of busy life and religious activity which instantly dispelled all thoughts of the weather.

We have heretofore described to the HERALD readers how, almost as by the fabled power of the magician, these two pretty summer settlements have sprung up among the sand hills, jungle, swamps and lagoons of the Jersey seaboard; how in these recently dismal thickets two flourishing villages of handsome cottages have arisen almost as the growth of a single night; how a dark and forbidding lagoon has been transformed into a beautiful lake, covered with pleasure boats, and how, on every side, the hammer of the builder is heard—how, in short, the "desert and the solitary place" have here been made glad, and how that which was a wilderness now blossoms like the rose. But coming in by Wesley Lake this morning, notwithstanding the high and chilly wind and the dark and threatening skies, the scene was remarkably impressive. The lake was unusually gay with pleasure boats, mostly occupied by young girls, and on both shores of the lake numerous groups of men, women and children filled up the picture, while from the surrounding woods and from different points came the sound of the hammer, the chorus of some singing party, and from beyond them all came the swelling roar of the mighty sea. Passing through the gate of Ocean Grove and reconnoitring the village we found it a populous hive. Every cottage appeared to be filled, every tent was occupied with a family, and a numerous multitude of visitors for the day were prospecting the settlement.

> From morn till noon, from noon to dewy eve;

In the great tent or tabernacle, provided for the regular church services in inclement weather, an enthusiastic prayer meeting was drawing to a close, and, with its final "amen!" the happy brothers and sisters quietly dispersed to their cottages and tents and to their preparations for dinner.

The regular opening of the camp meeting took place at half-past two P. M., in the great tent, when the audience assembled, inside and outside, numbered at least 2,000. The services were opened with the general singing of the hymn—

> Of Him who did salvation bring,
> I could forever think and sing

An earnest prayer followed from one of the ministers on the stand for the Divine blessing upon this camp meeting, for the reawakening to a more active life of holiness of every believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, and for the conviction and conversion of sinners. The congregation then sang the hymn which appears to be a great favorite among these Methodists—

> There is a fountain filled with blood,
> Drawn from Emmanuel's veins,
> And sinners, plunged beneath that flood,
> Lose all their guilty stains.

The Rev. E. H. Stokes then addressed the large and constantly enlarging congregation on the opening of this camp meeting. He spoke of the extraordinary circumstances of this vast assemblage and of the wonderful growth of this religious community by the sea shore. It was only some four years ago, he said, that a little company of the brethren, hardly exceeding a score in number, fixed upon this summer camping ground of Ocean Grove. From that little company of pioneers, look around and behold what, under the blessing of God, has been accomplished on these grounds devoted to His service. From a handful of enterprising and faithful men we have increased within four years to a prosperous and populous little city, and we have the enjoyments here of one of the most orderly, harmonious and happy communities of our broad land. The minister then proceeded to define the objects of this summer city by the sea. One object was a place for summer relaxation from the cares of the world, where we, of the Methodist Church, and those of all other churches and of no church, who might choose to abide with us, could come and share together the enjoyments of bodily rest and spiritual improvement. But the grand object was a permanent camp ground for an annual camp meeting—that peculiar institution to which our Church owes so much of its prosperity in this country. And the great purposes of these annual camp meetings are the promotion of holiness among believers and the conversion of sinners. The great body of the people sojourning and gathering here are our church members, and here, then, our first duty is the promotion of holiness in life and of a larger and more zealous devotion to the cause of Christ. Unity, harmony and active co-operation in this great cause are our first duties. There are brethren and sisters here from all parts of the State and from various sections of the country; and, though you see but a score or so of ministers on this stand, there are seventy of them at Ocean Grove at this hour—seventy ministers of Christ who have joined us to assist in the good work of this camp meeting. They are among you in the congregation, they are in the tents and cottages, they are here as soldiers for active service; and ministers and brethren and sisters, we want all to be united in the bonds of Christian faith, love and duty in this camp meeting. It will continue for at least ten days and we are strong in the faith that the results will be glorious in gathering of converts as well as the general advancement of believers in holiness of life. The enthusiastic preacher then went on to say that we wanted here no side issues, no technical points of Christian doctrine, no controversies upon sectarian dogmas; but we want to preach Christ and Him crucified—the saving blood of Christ, and sanctification, and regeneration, and atonement and the witness of the spirit. And he urged upon the brethren that they must assist the ministers and follow up the sermons in active prayer and work among the people in the cottages, the tents and at the altar. We want you to be prepared for the altar work, to pray with the convicted and to strengthen the converted.

And, continued the minister, during the hours of the day set apart for our regular religious services morning, afternoon and evening, we request our brethren and sisters, and visiting friends and strangers, all of whom we are glad to welcome to these grounds—we would ask them during our religious meetings not to stray off to the sea beach, nor to wander about the grove, nor to go pleasuring upon the lake, but to meet with us, and unite with us in our religious devotions. And so on, for an hour, the earnest preacher, opening this great camp meeting, continued to exhort his hearers to unity, harmony and zealous activity in the promotion of holiness and in the rescue of sinners from the wrath to come. That the brethren were thoroughly warmed up by his earnest and stirring exhortation was evident from their frequent responses in the course of his remarks, of "Amen," "Lord help us," "Come down just now," "Glory to God," and similar exclamations of faith and devotion.

Next the hymn was sung by the congregation, which begins with the verse:—

> O the blood, the precious blood
> Of Jesus shed for me!
> Upon the cross a crimson flood,
> Just now, by faith, I see.

With a prayer, and the asking of the divine blessing upon the meeting, the congregation was dismissed. On leaving the encampment your correspondent met hundreds of people coming in, and Ocean Grove truly presented the appearance of an army encampment in a populous little city in the woods of the Jersey coast. Before this camp meeting is brought to a close the grove will doubtless present a gathering of 10,000 people, or twice the number on the grounds to-day. Visitors, however, who are classed by the Church as among the sinners, will please take notice that no intoxicating liquors, distilled or fermented, are allowed to be sold on the grounds; that no profanity or unseemly conduct in any way is permitted within the enclosure, and that the gates are closed on Sunday against all "outsiders." Nor is any fishing allowed within the lines of the grove or Asbury Park on Sunday. To show how this law is enforced, for example, we need only mention that within the prohibited ground, for three successive Sundays, immense schools of bluefish have darkened the surf. Hundreds might have been taken out with shovels or sticks, or drawn out with rakes, so densely were they packed together in the waves dashing upon the shore. Some few, stranding on the beach, were picked up by the boys; but as no fishing on Sunday within the lines of Ocean Grove could be permitted the golden opportunity here for a grand haul for three successive Sundays was lost. If these schools of bluefish were temptations of Satan to shake the Sunday law of Ocean Grove he was baffled every time, though it was a severe trial to the brethren.

CHINCOTEAGUE.

CHINCOTEAGUE ISLAND, ACCOMAC COUNTY, Va., August 12, 1874.

Chincoteague Island, included within the Accomac circuit of the Methodist Protestant Church, is now the scene of its fourth annual camp meeting. The Rev. J. T. Adkins, moderator, is here conducting the services, assisted by the Rev. Messrs. L. W. Bates, J. D. Kinzer, R. H. Powell, W. J. Neepier and Rev. Mr. Green, a Methodist Episcopal minister. The tent holders are Captain Zach. Shelley, Captain Charles H. Jester, Captain James Mathews, Isaac Lewis, Luke Lewis, Richard Carpenter, Jashnai Whealton, Samuel R. Stibbs, Chas. Dunton, Z. B. Mumford, James Cluff, William Bowden, [illegible] Hill, William Cropper, Thomas Sneed, Eber Juster and others. Then there are, beside, the preachers' tents, the boarding and the wreckers' tents. So far as members are concerned the encampment is not so large as the previous ones. The severe storms prevailing in this section last Saturday and Sunday nights prevented many from coming over from the mainland of Virginia and Maryland. The meeting is a remarkable one for the sobriety and good order of all its surroundings, even at night, when the aborigines of the island flock in to enjoy it. The spiritual results of the meeting thus far are not so encouraging to the managers as they could wish; but before Saturday night a determined effort will be made to rouse enthusiasm, create a religious fervor and bring about conversions. Yesterday morning the Rev. Mr. Bates preached to an audience of about four hundred, from John, vi., 53. The sermon was preparatory to the communion and the administration of the rite of baptism to the infants of the Methodist Protestant Church, which preceded an "experience meeting" held this afternoon. The earnest, simple faith of the people of this island finds expression in some which will be hereafter described. A word concerning the place itself. Some fifteen years ago it had a thousand inhabitants, and out of that number not more than twenty-five of the adults could read or write. They lived just as their forefathers lived a hundred years ago. They were seldom visited, except by politicians seeking for votes. Henry A. Wise once owned the people, body and soul, and it is of them that he made the boast that he "represented a constituency ignorant of newspapers." He is very unpopular now, though, on account of an oyster law he had passed inimical to their interests. The first regular newspaper taken here was the Philadelphia North American, by Mr. John Caulk, formerly of Newcastle county, Delaware. The population during the last decade has increased to 1,500. They have three churches, two Methodist and one Baptist; nine stores, two hotels and one free school, by the way, the only one in Accomac county entitled, on account of its size, to the benefits of the Peabody Fund. Some twelve or fifteen new houses are going up this year and the island is rapidly assuming a position of some importance for its commerce and advantages as a a seaside resort. The island is nine miles long, its greatest width being only a mile and a half.

THE WRECKERS' TENT

referred to is for a party of wreckers attached to the Coast Wrecking Company of New York, and now engaged in bringing up the cargo of the Black Brothers, an English bark wrecked off the coast of Sinapucksen Bay about five years ago. The wreck was discovered the latter part of last June. The bark had a most valuable cargo of railroad iron and lead and was sunk in forty feet of water. The tackles have already got up 100 tons of lead, and there is supposed to be 150 tons more for them. There is supposed to be as much railroad iron which they have not touched yet. Under the law, of course, this will all go to market free of duty. The wreckers are naturally elated with their good luck, and at the camp meeting they praise God with great unction.

The commerce of the island is confined to fish and oysters, the trade in the latter being extensive, and their principal markets New York and Philadelphia. The soil is very poor, and but little grain of any kind is raised. Potatoes and melons are raised in great quantities.

What pulsation of the ocean or what note of "Æonian music" it was that revealed Chincoteague Island on the crest of the Atlantic coast will hardly ever be known, but certain it is that its old civilization is rapidly melting away. Said the island physician to me this morning, "We are improving morally, socially and mentally," and with some natural emphasis on the word morally, perhaps from the famous reputation the island has hitherto borne for the spontaneous growth of such germs as find cultivation and luxurious foliage in the religious hothouse of Plymouth church.

DELIGHTS OF THE TABLE.

The finest clams the world produces are off Chincoteague beach—great, white-shelled fellows, rich, fat and juicy, and they make such fritters! The oysters, too, are already full and fat, and come upon the table raw, stewed and fried when scarcely ten minutes from the water. The table is also loaded with curlews, snipe, various kinds of ducks, brant, wild geese, &c.; and as for fish, the drum, sheepshead, trout and roach come in schools to the frying pan. The absolute freshness of all the food in this region, whether from the air, the earth or the ocean, would make a dying anchorite wish for one more week of life.

The channel is not altogether unlike a Venetian street. It is crowded with small craft of every kind, from the common dugout to the Roman scarfed and gayly decked yawl to the more pretentious yacht. They are coming from and going to the mainland all day long and far into the night, and their human cargoes, filled with the buoyancy of youth or the spirit of the camp meeting, or that more dangerous spirit, the flow of which is not checked in this region, make old Ocean ring with the songs of Zion and the minstrelsy of sea-tuned music. At night you can "stroll along the sands" all by yourself, if proud, otherwise you can have for companions a long nosed Chincoteague porker and a flock of geese. All the animals, in fact, on the island are profuse in their personal attentions to a stranger, and are, withal, much better bred than city hogs and geese.

THE SEA BIRDS.

The water in the channel is as salt as the ocean, and while as yet the conveniences for bathing are rudimentary, the natural advantages are for the most part excellent. Speaking of the birds, the brent are the most mysterious. They look like a cross between the duck and goose, but where they come from and whence they go no mortal man has ever yet found out, neither has man ever seen what style of a nest they build nor what kind of eggs they lay. So says an intelligent islander, and adds that Dr. Kane writes of them as flying over his ships toward the North Pole, thereby confirming his belief in the existence of an open Polar sea. They come round here in the fall and go away in the spring. At night they soar high up in the air and make the canopy of the stars vocal with a shrill roar of voices which they never utter in the daytime, and which are responded to from the ocean by the drum fish along the coast, altogether making "music from the band" equal to a Boston peace jubilee.

THE CAMP MEETING

last night from ten to twelve o'clock was simply terrific. It was a little too much for nerves unused to such sights and sounds. Inside the twenty-four tents which are ranged round the preachers' rostrum four or five high stands were erected, from the top of which huge bonfires of pine knots were blazing, while lanterns, suspended from the tiers and tents, made the scene picturesque in the extreme. Six hundred voices joined in singing hymns, and then the Rev. R. L. Lewis took excellent advantage of an impressive sermon, delivered during the afternoon by the Rev. W. J. Neepier, of Snow Hill, Md. His theme was the certainty of God's punishment of sin. Mr. Lewis, in his discourse, admitted the existence and personality of Satan, the power of his operations on earth, and was warning his audience to seek an alliance with Christ for protection, when a "stricken sinner" leaped forward like a stag to the "anxious seats," shouting, "What must I do to be saved?" Had M. Coggia's comet struck the encampment it would not have been thrown into greater confusion.

A FIGHT WITH THE DEVIL.

The uproar was instantaneous and universal. The sinner went on the ground flat on his face. He wheeled over on his back. Terror spread over his countenance, and his limbs were as rigid as marble. His tongue was loose enough, though, and he might have startled "Chaos and Old Night" with his unearthly yells of "Oh! Sweet Jesus take me to-night!" "Heavenly Father! I come! I come!" "Shut up—shut up the gates of hell!" "Take off your hands, Satan! take them off!" "Oh! will Jesus come!" "I'll go! I'll go!" "Oh! God forgive me!" "Save, O save a child of wrath!" "Where is Jesus? Why don't He come?" "Oh! let me die, let me die!" By this time two or three brothers had raised the man upon their knees and were trying to hold him within the arena in which the great fight with the devil was going on. The din was hushed for a second and down the whole audience went on their knees praying for a direct manifestation of the Spirit. They arose and instantly the pine grove was filled with the notes of—

> I think I see the city,
> And the lighthouse on the shore;
> Hark! I hear the angels calling
> Come and welcome, rich and poor.

The melody only added fury to the awful roar, that might have been heard thirty miles at sea. The wife of the man "got happy." She "saw Jesus coming to save her husband." She clapped her hands; she rolled over and over, shouting "Glory to God!" She got up and hugged and kissed everybody and everything she could reach; she laughed like a maniac and yelled and spit at the devil like a tigress, and then, as if seized with some superhuman strength, she spread out her arms like wings, as if to fly, and literally jumped as much as seven feet straight up into the air "to meet," as she said, "the coming of the Saviour." If she leaped once she did a hundred times in succession, and then, as if by magic, at a wave of the preacher's arm, down they all went on their knees again to pray. The physical condition of the husband was appalling. He raved for help like a madman. His EYES GLARED LIKE A DEMON'S.

He tore his shirt front into ten thousand pieces, and white foam flowed from his mouth in a constant stream. A verse of a hymn was sung, inviting the sisters to the work. Into the arena a couple rushed, shouting, "Assist us, oh Lord!" One of them got behind him and took him under the arms, while the other tried to hold his head. At this point the devil, tired out or astonished at the force of the new recruits, seemed to let the poor sinner go for a minute, when he begun to shout, "I see Jesus coming! I'll pray; I'll pray! He's going to save me! Glory! glory! glory to God! Glory to God!" The swelling, moving chorus of "The Rock that is Higher than I," now rolled out with an unction and energy perfectly tremendous. The man was half up on his feet and clapping his hands when he was thrown to the earth with a force sounding like the thud of a stranded ship. The devil had recovered his lost ground, and now a scene ensued that would require a hundred eyes to see and a hundred pens to describe. Brothers and sisters shook hands with a force and quickness that ought to have torn their arms out. They hugged and kissed in the very madness and ecstasy of religious love. They danced around the prostrate form, and sung "Turn to the Lord and Seek Salvation" with a power compared with which the previous roar had only been a soft, poetical announcement of an earthquake. The harmony of the song rolled through the grove like the reverberations of a blast from giant powder. Amid it all the man writhed on the ground and uttering sometimes blasphemous curses and imprecations, anon wailing like a lost spirit shut up in hell, and then pleading in piteous tones for rest and peace. It could not last, and one by one the brethren gave out and retired from the contest. At twelve o'clock there had been no change, and the camp lights were put out; but they feel sure that the man will be truly converted to-night. The services have been very enthusiastic all day, and the meeting is to be kept up until Monday morning next. There were 150 guests to-day at the Atlantic Hotel, and the arrivals now average about sixty daily. To-morrow is the annual penning day and sale of ponies. Several speculators are here from a distance. It will be a great day for the native Chincoteaguers.

IN MOST DREADFUL TORMENT,

OLD ORCHARD CAMP.

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me, August 12, 1874.

Old Orchard, where the Twentieth National Camp Meeting is in session, is located in the city of Saco, Maine, on one of the finest beaches in New England, and is becoming one of the most popular sea side resorts in the Eastern States. It has fourteen miles of hard solid beach, which makes a very pleasant roadway place for driving. There are several large and commodious hotels and a number of smaller ones located along the beach. All are full. This is a new camp ground. It at first contained but thirty five acres, and was opened and dedicated in August last year, and the first sermon preached by the Rev. W. H. Boole, of New York. It was laid out in plots of 18 by 22 and 20 by 30 feet, and but few are unsold. On this portion there are more than seventy buildings, large and small. The dining hall will accommodate comfortably at least 550 persons. Last year Mr. Boole made a thorough survey of the adjacent lands for several miles on either side, and he at once purchased a plot of land next the camp ground, having a frontage on the sea of one-half mile along the high water mark, giving there free access to one of the most magnificent beaches on the Atlantic coast, and extending inland nearly a mile. This purchase contains 220 acres, and cost $20,000. Mr. Boole then called in nine men of well known Christian and business integrity to compose a board of trustees, who organized and have chartered their company as "The Old Orchard Ocean Side Association." The officers are as follows:—M. G. Palmer, President, Portland, Me.; F. A. Plaisted, Treasurer, Old Orchard, Me.; J. Luse, Secretary, Portland, Me.; J. D. Anderson, Attorney. Directors—Messrs. H. E. Ficket, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Charles Munger, South Berwick, Me.; F. A. Stratton, Springfield, Mass.; W. H. Boole, New York; A. Cummings, Woburn, Mass.; William McDonald, Auburndale, Mass.; J. E. Palmer, Portland, Me. There are about fifteen acres of forest which afford beautiful shade for the auditorium, a natural amphitheatre, capable of seating about 20,000 people. A large reservoir has been constructed and water is being distributed over the whole grounds.

THE BEAUTY OF THE SPOT

seems to be generally appreciated. About fifty families have passed the summer on the grounds. It has already, during its brief existence, taken a leading place in the affections of the Methodist denomination throughout New England, and has every promise of becoming the favorite camping ground of the Methodists of this section.

Adjoining the encampment on the north is a unique park of 100 acres, called Fern Park. It is a popular resort for the dwellers at the hotels and at the encampment. It has beautiful walks, shady nooks and arbors, and the seats are very inviting and comfortably arranged, so as to entice those romantically inclined within their enclosure. This park is free to all except picnic parties, and is kept in excellent order by its owner Mr. E. C. Staples. The drives on the beach and inland are very romantic and delightful. The ocean view is unlimited and grand, while the inland is seldom surpassed.

THE SERVICES.

The opening service of this meeting began at the grand stand in the grove on Wednesday afternoon. After prayer by the Rev. J. M. Woodbury, of Ferry Village, the Rev. J. Luce, Presiding Elder of the Portland district and President of the Old Orchard Association, in a few brief remarks, extended to the National Association, and also to the two Young Men's Christian Associations from Biddeford and Portland, a hearty and cordial welcome. The President of the National Association, the Rev. J. S. Inskip, made a very brief response and called for the singing of their old battle hymn,

> There is a fountain filled with blood.

After further devotional exercises, conducted by the Rev. William McDonald, of Boston, Mass., Vice-President of the National Association, the Rev. Mr. Inskip preached from Acts, ii, 1—"They were all with one accord in one place." He concluded an interesting sermon as follows:—

"There is great need of a revival of spiritual holiness. There is a great need of a revival of Pentacostal influences and to be filled with the love and goodness of God. Do not be afraid of it; it will not hurt you. Let us embrace it, then. Let us call upon God for a sanctified priesthood and for a sanctified people. Let us be filled with the Spirit, and let our hearts be set all aglow with heavenly fire. The best way to convert sinners is to increase holiness in the Church. We are mistaken if we think we can attract their attention by any other ideas."

The Rev. E. Davies, of Reading, Mass., offered a fervent prayer. He was followed by the Rev. J. B. Foote, of the New York Central Conference. After a few other prayers the meeting closed by singing "Praise God."

THE EVENING SERVICE

was held in the large pavilion tent, commencing at half-past seven o'clock by singing, "Jesus, lover of my soul," after which the Rev. John Allen, of Maine, repeated from memory the fifth chapter of first Thessalonians, and prayed fervently that the Lord might bless the first meeting held in the pavilion at this camp meeting. After singing "Rock of Ages," short addresses were delivered by the Rev. Mr. Clark, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Rev. E. Davies, of Reading, Mass., and others.

ORDINATION AT SETON HALL COLLEGE, NEW JERSEY.

A very impressive ceremony was performed at Seton Hall College, New Jersey, yesterday, in presence of a considerable number of clergymen, students, ladies and gentlemen from New York and different parts of New Jersey. George William Corrigan, the youngest brother of the Right Rev. Bishop Corrigan, of Newark, was ordained a priest. Mass was celebrated by Bishop Corrigan, assisted by Rev. Father Callan. Mr. Dornin, A. M., was the bearer of the crozier and mitre. Rev. Father Messner was master of ceremonies. Mr. Hill was candle bearer and Messrs. Dougherty, A. B., and Callaghan, A. B., acolytes. The sacrament was administered by the bishop. Rev. Father Messner was sponsor. The newly ordained priest, who has only just entered upon his twenty-fifth year, began his studies for the sacred profession at Mount St. Mary's Seminary, Emmetsburg, Md. He subsequently entered upon a theological course at Seton Hall College, and finally completed his preparation for the priesthood at St. Sulpice. Among the reverend fathers present in the sanctuary during the progress of the ceremonies were Messrs. Salt, of Seton Hall; Corrigan, of Jersey City; Fleming, of Elizabeth; Downes, of New Brunswick; McGovern and Glackmeyer.

At the conclusion of the services the Rev. George W. Corrigan, in a most solemn manner, invoked a blessing upon all who were assembled in the chapel. He is said to be a natural orator, and great things are expected of him in the pulpit. It is understood that he is to be Professor of Latin at Seton Hill for a year at least and possibly longer.

TRIPLE SHEET.

New York, Sunday, August 16, 1874.

THE HERALD FOR THE SUMMER RESORTS.

TO NEWSDEALERS AND THE PUBLIC:—

The NEW YORK HERALD will run a special train between New York, Saratoga and Lake George, leaving New York every Sunday during the season at half-past three o'clock A. M., and arriving at Saratoga at nine o'clock A. M., for the purpose of supplying the SUNDAY HERALD along the line. Newsdealers and others are notified to send in their orders to the HERALD office as early as possible.

From our reports this morning the probabilities are that the weather to-day will be fair, with northeast to northwest winds.

WALL STREET YESTERDAY.—Stocks were dull, but generally firmer and closed strong. Gold vibrated between 109¼ and 109⅜, and closed at the lower figure.

THE SARATOGA RACES.—Three good races were run at Saratoga yesterday, and there has been fine weather for the second summer meeting. Picolo, Catesby and George West were the winners.

MR. MOULTON is at Portland, Me.; Mr. Beecher is at Peekskill for his holiday, Mr Tilton is in Brooklyn, and Mrs. Tilton has disappeared. There has been quite a scattering, and it suggests the inquiry, "When shall these four meet again?"

THE POLICE REGATTA did not come off yesterday, the crew of the Twenty-third precinct failing to put in an appearance. The First precinct crew then went over the course, making about five miles in thirty-four minutes and three seconds, and claim the championship. We are glad the police of the Twenty-third precinct are good at putting down disorder, but are sorry they suppressed this row.

OUR RELATIONS WITH MEXICO would probably be critical if there were any such thing in that country as a central authority capable of asserting its existence; but if there were such an authority, to put the case Hibernically, our relations with that country might not be critical, because the events that tend to embroil the relations could not then occur. From Mexico to Texas and from Texas to Mexico there seems to be a constant circulation of armed parties. Indians from Mexico come over to Texas and rob and murder, and parties in pursuit of them go into Mexico, if necessary, to overtake them. If there were a Mexican government to resist the invasions from Texas there would be a Mexican government to which we might protest against the invasion from Mexico. As there are no authorities on the Mexican side, and as the posts of United States troops are too infrequent to be of any consequence, Texas must continue to help herself.

A SOLDIER PRESIDENT.—General Hancock's refusal to be a candidate for the democratic nomination for the Presidency has moved the Baltimore Gazette to protest against all military aspirants for that office. It thinks that the country does not want another soldier President, and that the honest republicans "never dreamed that when they elected Grant only the bad and none of the good traits of the military character would be developed in him." The habit of command, it says, is a dangerous element in office, and Grant has military self-will of the lowest type. Washington and Jackson had military self-will of the higher type, but it is not a statesmanlike quality. The Gazette, therefore, kindly advises the republicans to nominate their most capable, most representative statesman, and says "the democracy of 1876 has no more idea of nominating a military man than it has of nominating Grant or Butler." This resolution, of course, will not prevent the democracy from nominating a colonel, as the party is rich in officers of that rank who have never succeeded in finding a regiment.

The Social and Moral Aspects of the Beecher Case.

That is indeed a marvellous development of social life where any part of these Brooklyn revelations can be enacted. Every feature of the case is dark and sombre, and the whole story seems like proof of the moral rottenness of the society where these things are possible. There is a literary glamour about it all which saves it from the bare exposure of its innate vulgarity; but, if Mr. Beecher is to be believed, it is after all only the panel game in Plymouth parish. Stripped of all verbiage Mr. Beecher's counter accusations amount to this, that Tilton used his wife to make up an apparent case of seduction and criminality, and then sent his confederates—Moulton and Carpenter—to extort money from the clergyman by working upon his fears. The woman is at once the instrument and the victim of both the accuser and the accused. If they are to be scorned she is to be pitied; if they are not to be scorned it is because the impure atmosphere in which they lived gave them distorted notions of right and wrong and elevated what the world regards as vulgar crimes into the highest forms of moral and intellectual purpose. The philosophy of which Mr. Beecher was the high priest, though full of Christian aspiration, practically broke down the barriers which society and religion had set up, and sanctity and sin became so mixed that people of simple faith know not how to apply their old-fashioned notions of virtue to this peculiar and luxuriant growth. It is transcendentalism engrafted upon Christianity, the subtleties of the literary mind making refined vice preferable to rustic virtue, and even clothing the vulgarest of offences with a glamour superior to Christian purity and hope.

If we would measure these people it must be by the standard they apply to themselves, but not to each other. Viewed from his own standpoint, Mr. Beecher is a spiritual guide and pastor who became almost as familiar with the children and homes of his people as he was in his own house. Ordinary people would regard this extreme familiarity as ill-judged and unnecessary, and will not be surprised that such social and moral conditions should lead to just such scandals as were produced in this case. The people of Plymouth church, including Mr. Tilton, did not share such a belief, and were proud of their pastor and his visits, especially at the time Mr. Beecher was most eminently worshipped. "During these early years," says Mrs. Tilton in one of her letters to her husband, "the mention of his name, to meet him, or, better still, a visit from him—my cheek would flush with pleasure—an experience common to all his parishioners of both sexes." The next sentence betrays the danger. "It is not strange, then, darling," she says, "that on a more intimate acquaintance my delight and pleasure should increase." It is only in an exceptional society which is guided by exceptional notions in religion that such sentiments can become the commonplace utterances of wives to their husbands. But it is just such utterances as these which prepare us for the extraordinary avowal in the famous "Catherine Gaunt" letter. It was nearly five years later that the poor afflicted woman wrote—"To-day, through the ministry of Catherine Gaunt, a character of fiction, my eyes have been opened for the first time in my experience, so that I see clearly my sin. It was when I knew that I was loved to suffer it to grow to a passion. A virtuous woman should check instantly an absorbing love." The one sentiment could not follow the other unless these ideas of love, so different from those taught in the Scriptures, had their foundation in a religious fervor which false teachings had kindled and fostered. Therefore what would be wondrously unnatural in another is natural in this woman, and we are scarcely shocked that she should ask her husband, "Don't you know the peculiar phase of Christ's character as a lover is so precious to me because of my consecration and devotion to you?" Here is a woman who identifies her love of her Saviour with that of her husband, saying "I couple you with Him," and then confesses to an absorbing passion for another, who is in fact the teacher of religion by whom she had been imbued with these peculiar views. This is the most startling revelation of Christian ethics impregnating a whole society of the professed followers of Christ ever promulgated by the founder of a new sect.

But when we turn from the peculiar social and moral ethics of these people to their worldly practices we are surprised at the transformation. Theodore Tilton then shows that he can be as jealous as Griffith Gaunt and as unrelenting as Roger Chillingworth. Henry Ward Beecher cowers like the wretched clergyman Hawthorne depicted with such weird and wonderful power. The poor woman breaks down altogether, and mind and heart both give way. Out of all this misery, so æsthetic and so highly colored in its causes, there springs so much of the ugliness of humanity that Caliban becomes a very model of beauty. As there have been years of mawkish and sentimental devotion, so now there are years of huckstering in a woman's reputation. The husband charges the clergyman with the seduction of his wife. The wife both affirms and denies the charge. Money passes between the parties. A convenient friend is found who acts as the go-between for these men, one of whom is demanding hush-money and the other paying it. It is a disgusting exhibition apart from its criminality. At length Mr. Beecher becomes tired of paying and he resolves to waste no more energy on a hopeless task. Previous to this, however, the story had been percolating through a hundred channels. The Woman's Suffrage Association, like so many birds of ill omen, had settled down upon the scandal. Mrs. Stanton heard the story from Theodore Tilton, who impudently related it as a phase of social life; and as such we are led to infer, from her manner of talking about it, she was immensely delighted with it. Miss Anthony heard it the same day from Mrs. Tilton and at once rushed off to Tenafly to confide it to Mrs. Stanton. Mrs. Paulina Wright Davis raised her motherly hands over it with a sort of chuckling horror. Another woman, who shall be nameless, as being too base to name with these, published it to the world, and nobody believed it, because it was this creature who had told it. Then two eminent Brooklyn clergymen trailed their hands in the impure waters, and the Congregational Church considered the scandal in unhealthy convocation. At last everything was ripe for exposure, and Theodore Tilton published the story and verified it with his solemn oath. To complete this strange history Mr. Beecher retorts by a specific denial of all the allegations, and as explicitly charges Tilton and Moulton with pursuing him all these long years for the purposes of blackmail. This charge, like the others, is not without evidences of its truth, and so we are left in bewilderment and doubt as to what should be the verdict in the case. For the present we shall have to be content with a judgment something like the old Scotch verdict, "not proven," and wait for time to set the matter at rest. Happily, the verdict has become of little real importance, for the wrong is no longer in the crime charged against Mr. Beecher, but in the moral and social ethics which could make such a charge credible. We may be surprised that such a man would submit to blackmail for an instant if he was innocent, but we are even more surprised that he should make other people's houses so much his own as to give an excuse for it.

From such a state of social life as is revealed in these aspects of the great Brooklyn scandal it is impossible to draw any deductions. It is a story that carries with it its own moral. Men sat themselves up as gods and society worshipped them. Outside of the God of the Bible the divinities have always quarrelled among themselves, and Mr. Beecher, in his description of Tilton, has given us an amusing instance of one phase of the struggle between the modern Jupiter and Apollo. "When he was but a boy," says Mr. Beecher, "he looked up to me with affectionate admiration. After some years he felt himself my equal and was very companionable, and when he had outgrown me and reached the position of the first man of the age, he still was kind and patronizing." This is a very bitter remark for one god to make of another, and we are not sure that the sarcasm would have been less appropriate or less deserved if Tilton had uttered it instead of Beecher. So there is a dilemma whichever way we turn. Under such circumstances the only safety is in rejecting these men as gods altogether, and pursuing a different social and domestic life than that which seems to be laid down in the Plymouth ethics. This Brooklyn scandal is unhealthy in every way, but in nothing more than its moral and social aspects.

A Warning to Surf Bathers.

The sad accidents at Long Branch and Coney Island beach yesterday ought to teach our surf bathers a useful lesson. Surf bathing is healthful and invigorating, and with ordinary prudence is as safe as a bath tub. With a good beach and a strong rope any danger a bather encounters must be of his own seeking. But persons will persist in venturing out until they can just touch bottom, believing themselves safe so long as they are not out of their depth. They do not consider the force with which the waves roll in, nor the fact that a succession of heavy breakers may suddenly increase the depth of the water where they stand. In the case of ordinary swimmers the same imprudence is often manifested. They swim out too great a distance, forgetting that on their return it may require considerable exertion to get free from the surf and the in-rolling waves, owing to the strength of the undercurrent, before they feel bottom securely beneath their feet. They are also apt to miscalculate the force of the waves until they get fairly into them and feel the effect of their blows. It requires an expert and powerful swimmer to buffet the waves as they break on the shore roll after roll, rising on the crest of this one, diving under that and rolled over and over by the next, until the smoother water beyond is reached. When the breaking waves are passed the swimming is comparatively easy. But moderately good swimmers hesitate to venture out so far, hence they swim in just that part of the water where swimming is the most difficult and requires the greatest amount of exertion.

This was just the case with poor Schilling yesterday. He was a moderately good swimmer and a strong man. No doubt he felt perfect confidence in his ability to breast the waves in safety. But the sea was heavy and deceptive. Johnson, we are told, the champion swimmer, who undertook to cross the Channel from England to France, and Trautze, who is pitted against him for a grand swimming match at Long Branch on Thursday next, from the Ocean Hotel to the point at the west end and back, found it no easy task to force their way through the breakers to smooth water. Schilling was swimming at what he supposed to be a secure distance from the outer stake, to which the bathers' rope is attached, opposite the Mansion House. It is supposed that he was suddenly seized with cramps, and he struggled to get back to the shore and shouted for help, but the waves were too strong for him, and the bathers seemed to be panic stricken. Only one swimmer made an attempt to reach the poor fellow, but he became alarmed at the strength of the waves and the prospect of being clutched by the drowning man, and returned to the post, himself in an exhausted condition. At the moment of the accident, when the whole beach was in a state of wild excitement, Johnson and his trainer appeared on the steps opposite the Ocean House. Taking in the situation in an instant, he threw off his shoes and hat prepared for an attempt at rescue. Unhappily the people on the shore, who knew that a man was drowning, but did not know where, pointed to a swimmer who was struggling with the waves off the Ocean bathing ground, supposing him to be the person in peril. In rushed the gallant English swimmer with all clothes on, and with astonishing rapidity and giant strength he dashed through the breakers and over the tops of the rolling waves and seized the supposed drowning man, but found him able to reach the shore without help. Before Johnson's return it was all over with poor Schilling. He had disappeared, and the affrighted crowd on shore stood looking at the spot at which he had gone down. None but expert and powerful swimmers should venture out at all in surf bathing, and persons who cannot swim should never go beyond the white froth of the broken waves when the sea is heavy. With these precautions, which ordinary prudence dictates, surf bathing is as safe as it is healthful and enjoyable.

SADLER, the English rowing champion, has accepted Brown's challenge, and the race will take place in Coleraine, Ireland, some time in October.

Sanctity in Camp.

This is the season for religious rhapsodies by seaside and in the wood. The astonishing growth of the church which sprang from the ministrations of John Wesley was never more apparent than to-day. From Maine to Georgia resound the voices of praise, prayer and exhortation, and under the open sky there seems an influence more favorable to the propagation of piety than all the gorgeous interiors of cathedrals and temples which stand as monuments of older times. The gentle presence of nature seems to manifest God supplementing at every step the advance of the Christian spirit in its journeying to a "higher life." There is no doubt that in minds which are not absolutely enthralled by that incurable vulgarity that sees no purpose in nature beyond sensuous pleasure she impresses the simple lessons of religion far more deeply than ever has been done by human eloquence. To know, then, that the out-door worship of the present time excites such great and widespread interest, and really moves to their deepest depths hearts which have never been moved before, is but a confirmation of history. In "God's first temple" it is easy to find man in his softened moods, where, lolling in the lap of Mother Earth, in respite from his toil, he will acknowledge himself once again a child of Nature. And religion rightly seeks above all else to capture him in such a mood.

The mingling of the most beautiful features of nature with what are called the dearest gifts of grace does not seem at all incongruous, if one would but think upon it for a time. It is logical that these two most lovely types of the extremes of matter, material and spiritual, should be subjective of much the same ideas. However ignorant we are we always seek to look beyond Nature and above. And because she suggests so much more of majesty and glory than we see, so are songs of praise more fitly sung under her hoary arches, through which glimmers of the greater Beyond break softly from above.

The camp meetings at Ocean Grove, in Maine, in Virginia and elsewhere, which are described in other columns, attract to their umbrageous tents multitudes of worshippers from all portions of the country, and piety seems to expand and flourish within the hallowed precincts with remarkable vigor. Although the brethren and sisters are fond of singing their hymns and saying their prayers in the woods, they still hold firmly to the sanctity of the Sabbath and permit no shooting of bird or hooking of any of the finny tribe on the day of rest. These restrictions grate harshly on the ears of the worldly and may have crushed many a complacent hope in a religion of the future that would not let tradition interfere with the rational enjoyment of angling. But it must be remembered that the faithful esteem the work of fishing for men of the greater importance, and disconsolate maiden hearts would ache if they were denied it.

In Virginia a camp meeting seems to be the cause of quite a religious commotion on the island of Chincoteague. If the reports of the moral condition of the inhabitants are true there is no doubt a necessity for a thorough reform, and it is hopeful that the fight with the unclean spirits will go bravely on until they flee from one after another of their fleshly strongholds. A movement of such a sort is not wholly unneeded in other quarters of the globe, and the natives of Chincoteague even express a willingness to give a home to one of the contestants in the Brooklyn scandal, provided it becomes too uncomfortable for him to remain here. Their readiness to welcome such an exile is an exponent of their own character and makes it doubtful if he would experience much spiritual good in their midst. The worthy Chincoteagueans of course take it for granted that he is guilty of the offences charged against him.

Medical Manslaughter.

Schieferdecker, the man whose water cure establishment was recently under investigation by the Coroner, in consequence of the death of a patient, apparently through malpractice, will probably escape the operation of the law against unlicensed practitioners on the ground that he does not practise medicine or surgery or midwifery, but is merely the keeper of an establishment fitted up specially for the application of the theories of a so-called system of medicine; is, in fact, the mere governor of a water cure hospital. He pretends to cure diseases, and, therefore, is undoubtedly a physician, but his medical advice, if we are correctly informed as to his establishment, is not the basis of his claim for remuneration. He charges for the board of patients and for the material services rendered in the application of a given line of treatment according to the cold water insanity. Our police justices would be more likely to assimilate him to a hotel keeper than to a doctor. But the fact that that statute will not apply is no reason why he should escape the punishment he richly merits. Our very liberal law has always accorded to the people the right to have their diseases treated by whom they might select, learned or ignorant; but where death occurs under treatment the case is different. Then the diploma from a learned faculty protects the practitioner, but the man not so protected is liable to indictment for manslaughter. But even more definitely than this, that body of legislation on which the Board of Health stands has given that commission a general authority over institutions of this sort, and it has power to close them up and to bring offenders to justice. It has neglected its duty under the first of these powers, and it is to be hoped it will not repeat that offence in regard to the second.

A DINNER SCENE.—Cousin Joe, when he was first kicked down stairs by his host and then invited to dine, accepted the humiliating proposal. "For," said he, "if I can't be revenged on him, I'll be revenged on his victuals." But in the Marine Court yesterday the reverse of this scene was illustrated, when Mr. Dinustaded brought suit for being kicked and not getting his dinner afterwards. He was standing by the stove in an eating saloon, when the saloon keeper, thinking him a beggar, because he was badly dressed (in this country the worst beggars are well dressed) kicked him out. Mr. Dinustaded, in his testimony about his dinner, stated these facts, and the jury awarded him three hundred and sixty dollars. This will buy a good many meals, and hungry and impecunious individuals will do well to try Mr. Dinustaded's experiment.

"Jew" and "Jesuit."

As the newspapers have it in their power to control to a great extent the application of certain words which have acquired a meaning apart from their original signification, it would be well, perhaps, for the leading journals to discountenance their use. For instance, the same page of the dictionary contains two words which have acquired a secondary meaning that is very offensive to large bodies of people. One of these is "Jesuit," defined as "a crafty person and intriguer," and the other is "Jew," used as a verb, and signifying "to cheat or defraud; to swindle." The popular use of the latter word, however, is "to beat down the price of an article." We learn from the Jewish Messenger that, through the efforts of Mr. A. S. Solomons, of Washington, the publishers of "Webster's Dictionary" have agreed to discontinue the opprobrious use of the word "Jew," but that "they have positively turned a deaf ear to the immense Catholic influence brought to bear upon them in the endeavor to induce them to alter their definition of the word 'Jesuitical.'" This the Messenger thinks a simple act of justice, "more especially" as they have refused to the Catholics what they accorded to the Jews; but the truth is that both words stand in exactly the same category. They had their opprobrious origin in factious bitterness and prejudices; but there is no longer any excuse for their use. There is no need to offend sensitive Catholics by saying that a man is "Jesuitical" when he can be better described as crafty or cunning, nor is there any reason for using the term "Jew" when there are two or three better words to convey its implied meaning.

The use of opprobrious epithets is very common in every language. Generally they have little real application to the persons or things to which they are applied. Protestants speak of the Catholic Church as Romish and of Catholics as Papists, while Catholics are very apt to talk of "canting hypocrites" when they only mean a difference in religious belief. At one time the Mohammedan talked about "dog of a Christian," and the Christian about "dog of a Jew." Much of this bitterness has passed away, but there are occasional traces of it in current speech. If a German is brought before a police court the world is almost sure to hear of him as a "Dutchman," and if the offender happens to be a Hebrew the reporter seldom fails to mention that he is a Jew. Nobody ever thinks of remarking that the culprit was an Irishman, a Frenchman or a Spaniard in an opprobrious sense. We believe it was never remarked by any of the papers that a Catholic, a Presbyterian or a Methodist was arraigned at the Tombs, the only object of the remark being to call attention to the prisoner's religion. Why, then, should the Jews be treated differently? Maccaroni is a term of contempt among the Italians, but we have not the word in our dictionaries in its contemptuous sense. The Spanish language is full of terms of reproach, but we have not naturalized any of them for common speech. We can speak of the French and the Scotch without reference to the supposed frog eating propensities of the one or the bibulous qualities of the other. Even the cant word "Frenchy," meaning the same thing as that other cant word "fast," does not appear in the dictionaries or the newspapers. Why, then, should other terms equally objectionable be held sacred because they have been long in use? We make these remarks because reform in this direction is necessary, and it is to the press and not to the compilers of absurd American dictionaries that we must look for it.

Pulpit Topics To-Day.

The pulpit topics to-day are of a quiet religious order, as becomes the heated term. The chief pastors are out of town on their vacation, and their places are occupied by others. The Rev. Mr. Sabine, who is away in the West on business connected with the Reformed Episcopal Church, has left his pulpit to be supplied by the Rev. Mason Gallagher, who to-day will give a historical sketch of the old Prayer Book and its revision in 1662. He will show how mediæval theology was introduced into that book, and the necessity that now exists for its elimination if peace would be secured to the Protestant Episcopal Church. The controversy which exists between it and the Reformed Episcopal Church is but another phase of "The Eternal War Between Right and Wrong," of which Rev. Mr. Bennett will speak this morning, and to conduct and settle which we need "the Spirit in the Church." And with this Spirit we shall be more likely to "seek those things that are above" and to follow after "righteousness and temperance," and keep our eye and our thought upon the "judgment to come," about which things the Rev. Mr. Hallam and Dr. Deems will discourse to-day.

If false prophets have manful histories it is only fair that the world should know them. Mr. Bennett has such a history in his possession, which he proposes to reveal this evening to his Baptist hearers and to set forth in as true colors as possible the relation of his hero to history and to the world. Mr. Kennedy will bring his people to the edge of the crystal sea before the throne and will show them how the hundred and forty and four thousand who stand there gained their position, so that others following their example and washing their robes white in the blood of the Lamb may also stand on "the sea of glass before the throne."

A Mississippi Protest.

Strong indignation has moved the Columbus (Miss.) Index because the HERALD has criticised the recent disturbances in that State. It has asked us a great many conundrums, such as, "Can the HERALD suppose that we prefer war to peace?" "Must we stagger along under a grievous burden of stagnation?" "Does the HERALD suppose that money and values go utterly for nothing among us?" To all of which we suppose the right answer is, "No." "No," therefore, we reply. We do not want Mississippi or any Southern State to be bankrupted by the ignorance of the negroes and the rascality of carpet-baggers, but we think that the way to avoid this calamity is not through violence and blood. "The HERALD," says the Index, "has no conception of what Southern men and women have borne and do now have to bear, nor of the long and patient efforts made to conciliate and live in peace with the negroes, and until it does know of these things it is no fit judge of the justice or expediency or necessity of Southern action." On the contrary, we have a very clear conception of the wrongs which have been heaped upon a high-minded people, and because we have we are sorry to see a policy adopted which perpetuates them. Mississippi has escaped the hard fate of South Carolina and Louisiana, but she is bad enough off. What are we to think of the condition of a State which consoles itself that it is saved from ruin by the loss of its credit? Yet the Index rejoices that the famous repudiation of Mississippi is still remembered, and that its rulers have no money to steal because they can find nobody to lend it.

The Clergy on Mr. Beecher.

This being the season when clergymen are generally out of town—and surely these hard working men deserve a holiday, no matter how wicked we may become when deprived of their counsel—the reporters of the HERALD could not obtain the full clerical opinion of Brooklyn on the Beecher case. They succeeded, nevertheless, in subjecting some of the most eminent divines to an examination, the interesting results of which appear in our columns to-day. It is delightful to see with what kindness and sympathy his clerical brethren of other sects speak of Mr. Beecher in his great hour of trouble. There is no evidence of exultation that a Congregationalist has proved to be less prudent than a Catholic or a Baptist; and, though Mr. Beecher has preached latitudinarian doctrines, which the orthodox abhor, they do not think that he has exemplified in his own acts the dangerous tendencies of his creed. They show true Christianity in this course, nor would it be just to attribute it to a desire to stand by their cloth. Surely our clergymen ought to be above these mean suspicions, and nothing is more contemptible than to suppose that they are anxious to condone offences committed in their own profession. That his fellow clergymen are so firmly convinced of Mr. Beecher's innocence is strong presumption in his favor. We have heard from the Presbyterians in the persons of the Rev. Dr. Duryea, and the Rev. Dr. Freeman, of the colored branch; from the Methodist Episcopal Church, as represented by the Rev. Dr. Steel and the Rev. George Taylor, and from the Catholics by a clergyman who is too modest to give his name, but has no reason to be ashamed of his opinions. It is to be observed, however, that none of these sects seem to think as much of Mr. Beecher as Plymouth church prayer meeting does, and that no clergyman indorsed Professor Raymond's high compliment, that "Mr. Beecher is the prophet of God's Gospel in the nineteenth century, and those who strike at him are striking against the throne of God itself."

Thirty thousand portraits of the Prince Imperial, made by a new process, have been seized in Paris. They were printed on cards which seemed to be blank; but if the cards were wet with water a photograph of the Prince became apparent in a few seconds.

George Francis Train has been heard from. He wants to know how it is that the Associated Press and all the newspaper people are at large. He was put in the Tombs for printing the allegations of the Beecher scandal, and now there is nothing else in the papers, yet everybody goes free. He inquires the mysterious reason of this.

Fashion at the French seaside rigorously requires:—First, a beach dress; second, a breakfast dress; third, a morning dress; fourth, an evening dress; and as a lady cannot wear the same dress every morning and evening, there must be several of each sort except the beach dress. At least thirty for a month's stay, and not more than three in a trunk.

"They parted in sorrow, they parted in tears." The husband was to remain at Bordeaux, for he had a situation there; the wife was to go to London as a governess, and they filled the railway station with the noise and sorrow of their parting. "Do not cease to love me, and do not forget that you are the wife of a decent man," said the husband. "Never, never," said the wife, and she pulled out her handkerchief and tied a knot in it, that she might remember.

Colonel Colley, of the British Army, who distinguished himself greatly by his gallant conduct in the Ashantee war, arrived in this city yesterday from Europe by the Scotia, and became the guest of Mr. W. B. Duncan, of Staten Island, who boarded the steamer in question at Quarantine. Lord Colville, Chamberlain to the Prince of Wales and Master of the Royal Buckhounds, accompanied by his son, who is in the Grenadier Guards, also arrived by the same vessel, and, likewise, are guests of Mr. Duncan.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

The First Official Despatch by Cable from Rio Janeiro—Report from the South Atlantic Squadron—Assignment of Officers.

WASHINGTON, August 15, 1874.

The Navy Department this morning received its first official despatch by cable from Rio Janeiro, and which is, perhaps, the first business despatch received by the government over the newly laid lines. It is dated to-day, and was received at ten o'clock in the morning, from Admiral Leroy, at Rio Janeiro. Admiral Leroy has just relieved Admiral Strong of the command of the South Atlantic station. The despatch announces the condemnation through a medical survey of the Paymaster of the Monongahela, and asks that a relief may be sent out.

The Torpedo Boat Intrepid—Preparation for Experiments Before the Naval Committee—The Constellation at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., August 14, 1874.

The United States torpedo boat Intrepid, Captain Cook, while out practising yesterday with torpedoes had one of the valves to the starboard engine broken. She will be repaired immediately, in order to be in readiness for the torpedo experiments upon the arrival of the United States steamer Dispatch with the Naval Committee on board. Torpedoes have been planted in the inner harbor, and one weighing 500 pounds will be laid in the outer harbor to-morrow for the purpose of blowing up the old vessels which have been purchased for that purpose. Secretary Robeson and Admiral Porter will be present.

The frigate Constellation arrived here yesterday afternoon from Gardiner's Bay, to which place she will return, after remaining here about a week, for the purpose of drilling the students, who are upon their annual cruise.

THE SOUTHEASTERN RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

More Victims Not Expected to Recover—The Storm.

MONTREAL, Canada, August 15, 1874.

Four more of the victims of the Southeastern Railway accident are not expected to recover. Their names are Manson, Davis, Loomis and Minach.

The storm which caused the accident was the most severe ever known to have occurred in Sutton township. Although it only rained for two hours the whole valley for eleven miles was inundated, and five railway and twenty highway bridges were destroyed. The loss to the company is very heavy, and the crops were considerably damaged. It is thought that a waterspout burst in the hills, as the rain could not have produced so terrible a volume of water.

THE CENTRE HARBOR DISASTER.

Funeral Services of the Victims.

BOSTON, Mass., August 15, 1874.

Funeral services were held to-day in the Maverick square Congregational church, East Boston, over the remains of Miss Jessie Pierce and young Demont and Faits, victims of the drowning accident at Centre Harbor. A large audience was present to sympathize in the impressive ceremonies. The interior of the church was handsomely decorated with flowers.

PROFESSOR HAYDEN'S EXPEDITION

A Delightful March Through the Heart of the Rocky Mountains.

THE PROGRESS OF COLORADO TERRITORY.

What the Various Branches of the Expedition Are Accomplishing.

THE INDIAN WAR ONLY A SCARE.

CAMP OF HAYDEN'S EXPEDITION,
TWIN LAKES, ROCKY MOUNTAINS, August 12,
VIA DENVER, August 15, 1874.

The expedition has marched through 200 miles of territory without opposition. I send special messenger to-night to Denver. To-morrow we enter a travellers' country, bound due west, toward the frontier of Utah, and will thoroughly explore the remainder of Colorado, so that a map of the Territory will be completed by Professor Hayden not less accurate than the finest specimen of cartography. Our march has been delightful, passing through the heart of the Rocky Mountains, winding through profound and picturesque gorges, and visiting natural parks before unexplored. During the first portion of the march the mountain rains were copious and disagreeable, rendering camp life anything but charming. During the past week the weather has been sunny and salubrious, and it is estimated that 10,000 tourists in easy circumstances are living a camp life in the mountains, and, as you ascend a peak, hundreds of whited habitations can be seen in all directions dotting the green valleys and bordering the swift streams. The Hot and Soda Springs are thronged by consumptives and other classes of invalids, and many members of the English nobility are here in search of health.

ENGLISH PEERS AND CAPITALISTS

are also here in abundance buying up the rich mining and grazing lands of Colorado, and as I meandered over roads and streams the inevitable miner was everywhere, with pick, shovel and pan. Prospectors and tourists are about all the travellers on the road. There is an unusual enthusiasm about the progress of the Territory, largely stimulated by Hayden's expedition. Professor Hayden has been every day in the saddle, ascending mountain peaks, making observations of coal and gold mines and all the mineral regions, inspecting the mineral deposits and superintending the movements of his sub-expeditions. W. H. Holmes, geological artist, has made many colored sketches of the peculiar formations, some of which will form rare contributions to science. G. B. Chittenden has meandered the country over in all directions, making accurate observations. The pack animals and horses are all in good condition, and we move into the Elk Mountain region thoroughly equipped. There is and indeed the expected war is nothing but a scare. To-day Dr. Hayden received a messenger from Mr. Jackson, of the photographic party, who has been making pictures of the valley of the Grand River with success. Thence he moves into the San Juan mining country, now in a deplorable social condition. Twin Lakes, the last outpost of civilization, now forms a beautiful scene, environed by tents of eastern and western tourists and dotted by fishermen pulling out the choicest of trout. The snow capped mountains overshadow the shifting bodies of merry tourists, some entering the valley for repose, others leaving on a fatiguing eastern journey. Seldom have I witnessed a more captivating life than that I have passed since leaving Denver; up at sunrise riding over plains, surveying mountains and valleys, and often halting at some mineral spring for repose.

Years hence the Rocky Mountains must become the resort of the invalid, adventurers, travellers, explorers and the admirers of scenery of all shades and dimensions.

THE STEAMSHIP STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA

The Vessel Said To Be Aground on the Irish Coast.

The Report Denied by the Agents in New York.

LONDON, August 16, 1874.

The steamship State of Pennsylvania, which arrived at Larne on the 10th inst. (not Glasgow, as previously announced), from New York, is aground at the former place, but is expected to come off.

[Larne, where the steamship State of Pennsylvania is said to have arrived and run aground, is a seaport town of Ireland. It is situated in the county Antrim, on an inlet of the sea called Lough Larne. The town lies north-northeast of Belfast, and is eighteen miles distant from the great metropolis of the north of Ireland.—ED. HERALD.]

The Agents of the Steamship Report Her Arrival at Glasgow.

THE INDIANS.

Favorable Report from the Cheyennes—Good Effects of the Orders to Punish the Guilty—The Enrolment of the Arapahoes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 15, 1874.

John D. Miles, Indian Agent for the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, writes to the Indian Bureau from Darlington, Indian Territory, August 8, giving a satisfactory account of the situation in that vicinity. The Cheyennes who have come into the agency represent that the whole tribe of Cheyennes, except two small parties who had gone north, has camped on Peacon Creek, a tributary of the north fork of the Red River, about 165 miles from the agency, moving in that direction with the intention of coming in. The recent instructions of the department to agents, which had been communicated to them, the severe drought, and the fact that the military were ordered to

PURSUE AND PUNISH THE GUILTY

Indians, have contributed to this movement on their part. The two parties which had gone north had done so on account of a difficulty with some Comanches in relation to horses secured by a raid into Colorado. The Cheyennes who came in represent that the Kiowas and Comanches are constantly making successful raids into Texas. Agent Miles says the enrollment of the Arapahoes and Whirlwind's band of Cheyennes is progressing and will be completed in a few days, when he expects to present complete and exact statistics of the Arapahoe tribe of Indians, a task never before undertaken among the Plains Indians. The Arapahoes as a tribe Mr. Miles looks upon as a power on the side of the government.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSEMBLY.

Interesting Papers Read—Success of the Children's Meeting.

FAIRPOINT, N. Y., via MAYVILLE, N. Y., August 15, 1874.

At the Chautauqua Lake Sunday School Assembly this morning questions and answers relating to intermediate work were part of the exercises. Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller, editor of the Little Corporal, read a paper on Sunday school literature. The original poem read at the close of last Sunday's school services was freely criticised.

At the children's meeting this afternoon crowds were present from the surrounding country. J. M. Freeman made an excellent address and Frank Beard gave a caricature lecture. Rev. T. M. Eddy, D. D., of New York, lectured this evening and a meeting of teachers was held. The day was delightful and closed with music on the lake and fireworks.

KEROSENE EXPLOSION.

Another Attempt to Kindle a Fire with the Explosive Liquid, and the Usual Result.

NEW HAVEN, August 15, 1874.

This afternoon about one o'clock Mrs. Ann Cummerford, residing at No. 254 Jackson street, endeavored to kindle a fire by using kerosene oil, which she turned from a can. The oil took fire and exploded the can and set fire to the woman's clothes. She fled to the garden and two men passing went to her assistance and extinguished the flames, but she was so badly burned that it is doubtful if she recovers.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Italian Opera Season.

The arrangements of Messrs. Maurice & Max Strakosch for the Italian opera season of 1874-5 in America are now complete. The season will commence at the Academy of Music on Monday, September 28, and will last uninterruptedly until December 5, after which date the company will visit other cities. The principal artists of the company are as follows:—Mlle. Emma Albani, Mlle. Marie Heilbron, Mlle. Potentini, Mlle. Alice Maresi, prime donne soprani; Miss Annie Louise Cary, prima donna contralto; MM. Carlo Carpi, Debassini, Devillier, primi tenori; Signori Tagliapetra, Del Puente, primi baritoni; Signori Fiarini and Scolara, primi bassi. Director of Orchestra, Signor E. Muzio; assistant conductor, Mr. S. Behrens; director of chorus, Signor Bolis. The répertoire is very extensive, comprising the following works:—

"La Stella del Nord"	Meyerbeer
"Flying Dutchman"	Wagner
"Ruy Blas"	Marchetti
"Romeo and Juliet"	Gounod
"William Tell"	Rossini

"Martha"	Flotow
"Lucretia"	Donizetti
"Il Barbiere"	Rossini
"Lucia"	Donizetti
"Roberto"	Meyerbeer
"Ernani"	Verdi

Mlle. Albani is a young prima donna, a French Canadian by birth, who has occupied a foremost position in the operatic world in Europe since her début at Messina in 1870. She studied for several years under the famous Duprez in Paris and the equally great Lamperti in Milan, and at the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, and the Imperial Opera, St. Petersburg, she shared the honors and laurels with La Diva Patti. Mlle. Heilbron is a Belgian, who opened the season at Covent Garden this summer, and who was the principal star at Les Italiens, Paris, last winter. The other new artists are from Les Italiens and La Scala. New scenery and appointments are promised for each opera, and the completeness of ensemble so faithfully carried out last season, notably in the instances of "Lohengrin" and "Aida," will be adhered to this winter.

One of the most pleasing surprises of the coming season will be the production of Verdi's "Grand Requiem Mass," written in memory of the patriot Alessandro Manzoni. Mlle. Heilbron will open the season with "La Traviata."

Musical and Dramatic Notes.

Miss Minnie Conway, late of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, goes to Boston this season.

A theatrical performance in Mexico city in behalf of the wounded soldiers of Spain netted $800.

The Stage, which has been suspended during the hot weather, will reappear on Monday on the occasion of Mr. Toole's début at Wallack's.

Miss Lillie Eldridge appears at the Brooklyn Theatre on Monday next in a new play by Stanley McKenna, entitled "Olive; or, The Mystery."

"The Dwarfs Duel" is the title of a new sensational play written by Messrs. C. W. Barry and J. Fox, which will be produced at Wood's Museum on Monday night.

The effect of the moderation of the sultry weather has been noticeable at the theatres. On Friday evening the receipts at Booth's were materially increased.

The thirteenth Sunday concert of the Allgemeiner Saengerbund, assisted by Downings' Ninth Regiment Band, will be given to-day at Jones' Wood Colosseum.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams will follow the run of "Belle Lamar" at Booth's. "Connie Soogah" is announced as their opening piece. Barney has quite recovered his health, and is enjoying the sea breezes that make his "Kathleen Villa" in Bath so delightful a summer resort to his host of friends.

Henry J. Montague, manager of the Globe Theatre, London, has arrived here. He is an excellent actor, and, notwithstanding his avowal that his trip is merely one of pleasure, it is intimated that he is entertaining seductive propositions from the manager of one of our leading theatres for an early professional appearance.

The variety performances of Tony Pastor's troupe at the Olympic Theatre have made a "big hit," and that with the weather too hot to be pleasant indoors. The present will be the last week of the Pastor combination, and then the regular season will begin. The programme for this week has been entirely changed, and several new specialties are announced.

"What Should She Do? or, Jealousy," is the full title of Mr. Daly's new drama which is to open the season at the Fifth Avenue. The action hovers between London and Jamaica. Roberts has painted a most entrancing and fairy-like scene of tropical luxuriance for the island view, and the entire mise en scène is said to surpass anything yet presented under Mr. Daly's management.

Mr. Henry D. Palmer, of the management of Booth's Theatre, associated with Ullman, the Parisian operatic manager, has concluded an engagement with Dr. Hans von Bülow, "the world's greatest pianist," for 150 concerts in America. He is to receive 2,500f. for each performance, and have his hotel, all travelling and servant expenses paid. His first piano recital will take place in New York early in October, 1875.

The appearance of Mr. J. L. Toole, the popular comedian from England, on Monday night next, at Wallack's Theatre, will be among the theatrical sensations of the season. Old playgoers have indulged in a vast amount of speculation concerning the chances of success of the new candidate for public favor, and a diversity of opinions prevail; but the general verdict is certainly very favorable to Mr. Toole. The impression seems to have gained ground in some quarters that the role of this gentleman is limited to representations of low types of English character, and that in other and higher ranges he is equalled by many an artist of lesser reputation than that which he enjoys. To prove the fallacy of this statement it is only necessary to mention that Mr. Toole's répertoire embraces nearly 300 characters, in each and every one of which he has been pronounced entirely unrivalled. He is admitted in England to be the greatest comedian of the day, and his popularity in that country is so great as to entirely eclipse all competitors. The announcement of his name is sufficent to fill to its utmost capacity the largest theatres in the United Kingdom—and in Dublin, notable for the captiousness of its critics and the discrimination of its audiences, he is almost idolized. Mr. Toole's powers are of that rare order which moves his auditors to tears and smiles alternately. His "make up" is wonderful indeed. So great are the changes of which he is capable that his oldest friends are often incapable of distinguishing him for the moment, while the originality of his humor has seldom been equalled.

SARATOGA RACES.

Fourth Day of the Second Summer Meeting.

THREE EXCELLENT RACES.

Picolo the Winner of the Mile and an Eighth Dash, Catesby of the Mile and Three-Quarters and George West of the Hurdle Race.

Charming weather and a good track encouraged the belief that the racing would be spirited and fast to-day, and a fair attendance was the consequence. The grand stand presented a lovely appearance. Three races were announced to take place, the first a dash of a mile and an eighth, with nine starters, the second race a dash of a mile and three-quarters, with three starters, and a hurdle race of two miles, over eight hurdles, in which four contended for the prizes. The racing throughout the day was excellent, the time very fast and the spectators were highly delighted with the day's amusements.

The first race was a dash of a mile and an eighth, beaten maidens allowed 7 lbs., and had for starters William Cottrill's bay filly Sally Watson, by Daniel Boone, dam Maggie G., 4 years old, carrying 105 lbs.; A. B. Lewis & Co.'s chestnut filly Governess, by Planet, dam Katona, 4 years old, 98 lbs.; John Coffee's brown filly Ida Wells, by Leamington, dam Jessamine Porter, 3 years old, 80 lbs.; T. B. & W. R. Davis' chestnut horse Fadladeen, by War Dance, dam Nora Creina, aged, 114 lbs.; Oden Bowie's bay colt Picolo, by Concord, dam Mandina, 3 years old, 83 lbs.; Joseph Donahue's gray mare Lizzie Lucas, by Australian, dam Eagless, 4 years old, 105 lbs.; George Ayres' chestnut colt Erastus Corning, by Lightning, dam Nora Creina, 3 years old, 83 lbs.; D. McDaniel's chestnut filly Madge, by Australian, dam Alabama, 3 years old, 87 lbs., and J. W. Weldon & Co.'s bay colt by Australian, dam by Scythian, 4 years old, 108 lbs. Madge had the call in the betting, Lizzie Lucas being second in favor, Fadladeen the third choice in the pool sales, the others selling for small prices, many of them as a field. Mr. Bowie's Picolo won the race by half a length, Lizzie Lucas second, Fadladeen third. The race was well run, a great speed from the beginning, and those who started to make a waiting race of it had no chance at the end. The winner was a fielder, and those who won on him were very jubilant at the result. The Paris Mutuels paid $413 90 on him for the $5 invested. Picolo is a dark bay colt, with black points, very stoutly built, about 15½ hands high, and he runs with a great deal of vim. He is a full brother to Galway. He was timed by his owner a mile—from the judges' stand back to that point again—who made the time 2:42½; but as this is not official (and rather faster than we think the horse ran) it will not take a place on the record with Gray Planet's time of the day before.

The second race was a free handicap, for all ages, one mile and three-quarters. Three horses started for this event. These were Oden Bowie's bay colt Catesby, by Eclipse, dam Katie, 4 years old, carrying 99 lbs.; D. McDaniel's chestnut colt Galway, by Concord, dam Mandina, 4 years old, 98 lbs., and John Coffee's brown colt B. F. Carver, by Leamington, dam La Victime, 4 years old, 95 lbs. Catesby had the call in the betting, B. F. Carver second choice, Galway selling well up to the latter. The favorite won an easy race, Galway second, B. F. Carver third. The time was again most excellent—3:07¾—only three-quarters of a second behind the best, which was made by Frogtown at Lexington in 1872. Thus the ex-Governor of Maryland won a second victory on the same day, a circumstance that he says never occurred to him before. Mr. Bowie deserves success, as he is a great lover of thoroughbred horses, and he comes from a family that have been racing horses for over a century.

The third event of the day was a hurdle race, with eight leaps, two miles, a free handicap for all ages. There were four starters, consisting of Jo. Donahue's chestnut gelding George West, by Asteroid, dam Kate Hayes, 5 years old, carrying 150 lbs.; owner's gray mare Mary Clark, by Lexington, dam Eagless, 6 years old, 141 lbs.; M. J. Tully's bay gelding Vesuvius, by Vandyke, dam Lizzie Berry, 141 lbs., and A. P. Green's bay filly Daylight, by Lightning, dam Laura Spelman, 4 years old, 135 lbs. George West was the favorite at two to one over the field before the start. He won a capital race, Daylight second, Mary Clark third.

The following are the details of the racing as it came off:—

The First Race.

THE RACE.

The start was a very fair one for so large a field of horses, and they came rushing up to the stand at a very rapid rate, Lizzie Lucas showing the way, Erastus Corning second, Fadladeen third, Madge fourth, Sallie Watson fifth, Ida Wells sixth, Governess seventh, Picolo eighth, Weldon's colt ninth. Going round the upper turn many changes took place in the group behind Lizzie Lucas, and at the quarter pole she led two lengths, Fadladeen second, Erastus Corning third, Sallie Watson fourth, Governess fifth, Picolo sixth, Madge seventh, Ida Wells eighth, Weldon's colt ninth. Lizzie Lucas led down the backstretch, Picolo running very fast through the others, and at the half-mile pole she was only one length in front of Picolo, Fadladeen third, Ida Wells fourth, the favorite having been run into, and dropped back; the others beaten off, as the pace had been very sharp all the way to this point. Going around the lower turn Lizzie Lucas still showed the way, but was severely pressed by both Picolo and Fadladeen. As the trio came into the homestretch they were nearly parallel, but coming up toward the furlong pole old Fadladeen began to show signals of distress, and afterward Lizzie Lucas had to be pricked and whipped, as Picolo was beating her. The gray filly responded to the persuader gamely, but the colt with the light weight up finally worked to the front and came home a winner by half a length. Fadladeen was third, four lengths behind Lizzie Lucas, Madge fourth (the collision having no doubt retarded her progress on the way to victory), Sallie Watson fifth, Ida Wells sixth, Erastus Corning seventh, Weldon's colt eighth, Governess ninth. Time, 1:56, which is the fastest at the distance that was ever run before, but is not as good a race as Fannie Ludlow's, who carried 107 pounds and ran in 1:56¼. Picolo on this occasion had but 83 pounds up. The first three quarters was run in 1:21¼.

The Second Race.

PURSE $600; one and three-quarter miles; a free handicap for all ages.

STARTERS.

Oden Bowie's b. c. Catesby, by Eclipse, dam Katie, 4 years old, 99 lbs. (Donahue) ... 1
D. McDaniel's ch. c. Galway, by Concord, dam Maudina, 4 years old, 98 lbs. (Clark) ... 2
John Coffee's br. c. B. F. Carver, by Leamington, dam La Victime, 4 years old, 95 lbs. (Johnson) ... 3

Time, 3:07¾.

THE BETTING.

Catesby	$230	610	425	600	460	500
Galway	125	310	245	360	290	320
Carver	130	300	175	265	200	200

THE RACE.

Catesby was away first, but was immediately afterward pulled to the rear, and B. F. Carver showed the way up the fractional track, and running out on the regular course at the half-mile pole was two lengths in front of Galway, the latter three lengths ahead of Catesby. The horses ran in this way around the lower turn and up the homestretch to near the judges' stand, when Mr. McDaniel motioned to the jockey of Galway to force the pace, and, the boy responding to the order, Galway ran past the stand head and head with Carver, three lengths in advance of Catesby. Going around the upper turn Galway showed in front, and was half a length ahead of the dark colt at the quarter pole, Catesby two lengths behind. On the backstretch Catesby moved up closer, and as the horses passed the half mile pole Galway was leading half a length, B. F. Carver second, one length ahead of Catesby. Going into the lower turn Catesby made his run, and when Galway's jockey heard him coming he increased his horse's pace, and then in a moment B. F. Carver was third. At the three-quarter pole Galway had his head only in front, but soon afterwards Catesby was on equal terms with him, and the latter then coming away, won an apparently easy race by three open lengths, Galway second, six lengths in advance of B. F. Carver. Time of the mile and three-quarters 3:07¾, which was capital time, as it has only been beaten once before; but again this race was a handicap, and Catesby had nine pounds less than the regular weight for age, which was carried by Frogtown when he won in 3:07.

GRAY PLANET.

Between the races Mr. Belmont's Gray Planet was shown on the track and received a great ovation. He galloped a quarter of a mile with Evans on his back for the gratification of the public. The horse was much admired by the spectators, and many of them saw racing points in him that they never discovered before. So much for being a winner, and having the fastest time on record.

The Third Race.

HURDLE RACE—Two miles, over eight hurdles; a free handicap for all ages; $500 to the winner, $150 to the second horse.

STARTERS.

Jo Donahue's ch. g. George West, by Asteroid, dam Kate Hayes, 5 years old, 150 lbs. (Gaffney) 1
A. P. Green's b. f. Daylight, by Lightning, dam Laura Spelman, 4 years old, 135 lbs. (Midgeley) 2
Owner's gr. m. Mary Clark, by Lexington, dam Eagless, 6 years old, 141 lbs. (Little) ... 3
M. J. Tully's b. g. Vesuvius, by Vandyke, dam Lizzie Berry, aged, 136 lbs. (Slattery) ... 4

Time, 3:55½.

THE BETTING.

George West	$450	360	510	250
Mary Clark	135	110	250	110
Vesuvius	50	40	65	50
Daylight	60	45	85	40

THE RACE.

Vesuvius was first away to a good start, Mary Clark second, George West third, Daylight fourth. They ran sharply to the first hurdle, Vesuvius showing the way over it, Mary Clark second, George West and Daylight together, and both giving it a rap. Going around the upper turn Vesuvius continued in the front, and at the second hurdle, which was 100 yards beyond the quarter-pole, he was first over, Mary Clark second, but she struck the top rail and then fell back to fourth place. George West was third and Daylight last. The third hurdle was near the half-mile pole, and Daylight, by fast running down the backstretch, was the first to make the leap, followed by George West, then Vesuvius, Mary Clark bringing up the rear. Going around the lower turn the horses drew closer together, and at the fourth hurdle, which was stationed at the furlong pole on the homestretch, George West led one length, Daylight second, one length in advance of Vesuvius, who was a like distance in front of Mary Clark. On they came to the stand and then over the fifth hurdle just beyond it, George West leading one length, Daylight second, Vesuvius third and Mary Clark fourth, all very close together. When they jumped the sixth hurdle the horses were nose and tail, George West leading, Daylight second, Vesuvius third, Mary Clark fourth. They then ran sharply down the backstretch, and at the seventh hurdle George West and Daylight were head and head, one length in front of Vesuvius, Mary Clark close up. The pace was forced on the lower turn, and as they came into the homestretch Mary Clark took second place. When the horses jumped the eighth hurdle there was very little difference between George West and Mary Clark. They were both in the air at the same time; but the gelding landed the best, and was running before the mare recovered after the leap. Daylight was third over the hurdle, Vesuvius fourth. George West came home a winner of the race by three lengths, Daylight second, a short head in front of Mary Clark, the latter four lengths in advance of Vesuvius. Time of the two miles, 3:55½.

And thus ended the fourth day of the second summer meeting of the Saratoga Association.

WEST SIDE PARK.

Third and Last Day of the Summer Meeting—Captain P. the Winner of the Three Minute Purse and Lizzie Adams the 2:44 Race.

The summer meeting at the West Side Park, Jersey City, came to a pleasant end yesterday with two events—the three minute and 2:44 purses. The attendance was excellent, the track in fair condition and the weather of the most delightful character. In the three minute purse there were eight entries, six of which came for the work, these being W. Smith's gray gelding Badger, Peter Williams' bay stallion Tom Berger, W. B. Slingham's bay mare Pattie, G. Shipman's bay gelding Trenton, W. McRoberts' chestnut gelding Captain P. and A. Bourrett's bay mare Adelia. In the pools before the first heat Captain P. was the favorite, selling for $15, Adelia $10 and the field $10. Captain P. won the race in three straight heats, the time being 2:58½—2:50¾—2:49½. The owner of the winner was considerably exercised that the Captain had spoiled his chances for future 2:50 purses. Pattie took the second money and Tom Berger saved his entrance.

The second event was the 2:44 purse, in which there were six entries. Four came for the work—M. McNamara's sorrel gelding Mack, John Frost's sorrel mare Lizzie Adams, F. Freese's sorrel gelding Jim Coyle and A. Bourrett's roan gelding T. E. Gordon. Lizzie Adams was the favorite, selling in the pools for $20 against $12 for the field. Lizzie won the first and second heats without difficulty, but was beaten in the third by Mack. When the horses were called for the mile heat the judges cautioned the driver of Lizzie not to repeat the performance by which she lost the previous heat, but "let her go on and not pull her to a standstill," which advice greatly pleased Lizzie's backers, as they were of the unanimous opinion that she could have won the third heat if given her head, or in other words, "the driver lost it purposely." She won the fourth heat easily, giving her the race, and Mack just saved his distance.

A mule race, dash of half a mile, wound up the sport of the day and the meeting. Nine of these obstinate animals came to the score, seven of which were owned by one man. It was arranged that the riders should be changed at the stand and the last mule home take the purse of $25. The event produced some merriment, but fell far short of what was anticipated. Mr. Brady, of Jersey City, is the owner of the winner, and he can congratulate himself on possessing a very slow mule.

THE POLICE AT THE OAR.

It having been announced that the return rowing match between the crews composed of men attached to the First and Twenty-third precincts would be rowed yesterday afternoon, starting from the Battery to and around Bedloe's Island and return, a large concourse of people, for the most part residents of the First ward, assembled along the water front of the Battery Park for the purpose of witnessing the contest. The articles of agreement provided that the race should be rowed between the hours of two and five o'clock; but, up to the latter hour, the crew from the Twenty-third precinct had failed to put in an appearance or to send any word as to the cause of their absence. This was freely commented on by the crowd, whose sympathies were strongly in favor of the First precinct men, the more so for the reason that on the last occasion when the two crews had met they were beaten by their uptown antagonists. On this occasion it was expected that the tables might be turned and the previous defeat atoned by a victory. At five minutes past five, however, the judges, deeming any further delay unnecessary, ordered the First precinct men to their boat, instructing them to row over the course, which they did in fine style, making the distance—about five miles—in thirty-four minutes and three seconds.

The following are the names of the crew and their weight:—

Name.	Pounds.
Christopher Brady, bow	152
James Pilkington, No. 2	170
R. A. Montgomery, No. 3	164
Patrick Scanlon, stroke	162
Patrick Generty, coxswain	115

The above crew now claim the championship of the Police Department and challenge any other precinct to row them. A match is already in course of arrangement with a picked crew from the harbor police.

opened at 109⅝ and closed at 109½, which were the highest and lowest figures of the day. The carrying rates were ½ to 2 per cent. The customs receipts to-day were $323,575, and for the week, $3,748,192. The Sub-Treasurer paid out to-day $11,000 in redemption of five-twenty bonds, and $690,000 on interest account.

MONEY—THE BANK STATEMENT.

In the bank statement the important changes are the decrease in specie, which reflects the shipment of gold last week to Europe, and the decrease in deposits, which is caused by the falling off in specie and a reduction of $1,284,000 in loans—loans being the same item as deposits on the other side of bank ledgers. The total reserve is down $3,359,400. The total reserve required under the new law is $59,478,875, and the banks hold $88,930,100, or $29,451,225 more than the legal requirement. They so held last week $31,724,100, so that there has been a decrease of $2,272,875. The following is a comparison of the averages for the past two weeks:—

	August 8.	August 15.	Differences.

STOCKS

were extremely dull during the day. The full range of fluctuation was only ¾ per cent; the ordinary figure being only ¼ per cent.

Stocks were firm during the last hour of business and the dealings increased slightly. The leading features were New York Central, Union Pacific and Pacific Mail. The first named rose ⅜ per cent to 102. At the same time the stock was offered at 100¾, seller sixty, but no transactions were made on this basis. The improvement in the remainder of the list was ⅛ to ⅝ per cent, the closing quotations having been generally the highest of the day. St. Paul common and Union Pacific advanced ⅝ per cent, Pacific Mail, Wabash, Lake Shore and Harlem ¼ per cent, and Northwest common and Ohio and Mississippi ⅛ per cent. The only feature of the market early in the day was a liberal selling movement in Western Union and Pacific Mail, said to be for the account of the only leading operator left in town. The sales to-day were less than 49,000 shares, distributed as shown in the following table, which also gives REAL ESTATE MORTGAGE COUPON BONDS FOR sale by LIVINGSTON & COMPANY, Bankers, 10 Pine street.

SINKING FUND BONDS

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD.

PRINCIPAL PAYABLE IN GOLD, IN 20 YEARS; INTEREST 8 PER CENT IN CURRENCY, OR 7 PER CENT IN STERLING MONEY.

THESE BONDS ARE ISSUED TO RETIRE THE OUTSTANDING INCOME BONDS, OR TO FUND OTHER INDEBTEDNESS OF THE COMPANY.

They are a Second Mortgage on the entire unsold Lands of the Road, now amounting to and will be a first lien on the lands when the $10,400,000 land grant bonds (one-half of which is already provided for) are retired. The further sale of 1,250,000 acres, at prices heretofore realized, would cancel the now remaining balance of land grant bonds, when this bond would become a first mortgage on nearly 10,000,000 acres, the value of which is much more than sufficient to cover the entire issue of sinking fund bonds; besides which, these bonds are a mortgage on the road, its franchises and equipment, subject to the first mortgage and the government lien.

One per cent of the bonds withdrawn annually and redeemed at par.

The sinking fund bonds are offered in exchange for the outstanding income bonds at the rate of six of the new bonds for five of the incomes, which, considering that the latter are not mortgage bonds, is a very advantageous change for investment.

Exchanges can now be made or information obtained at the

DROWNED AT LONG BRANCH.

The Leader of the Mansion House Orchestra Drowned While Bathing—Gallant Conduct of an English Swimmer.

LONG BRANCH, August 15, 1874.

The weather has not disappointed expectations. The northeasterly storm that appeared to threaten us yesterday did not arrive, and to-day is one of the most delightful of the season, with a magnificent sea breeze, a cloudless sky and a bright sunshine. The sea is heavy, the long waves rolling in with a sullen roar, as if still angered at the disturbance to which they were subjected yesterday. But the bathing was pronounced to be good this morning, although the breakers were strong, and bathers were cautioned by the attendants of the grounds not to venture out a great distance on the ropes. There was a strong undertow, and the sea, in the language of the careful bathing house keeper at the Ocean Hotel, "would bear watching." The waves came in with more force than the inexperienced supposed, for the sea was smooth and unruffled beyond. But eyes accustomed to look upon the ocean could see that the long curling masses of water were possessed of a giant's power, and hence their caution to the bathers. It would have been well for one poor fellow, whose life was sacrificed to-day, if he had heeded the caution.

A CRY OF DANGER.

Between eleven and twelve o'clock the crowd on the beach was at its full. The surf opposite the Ocean House was alive with bathers, and the tossing about they received kept the air merry with screams and laughter. Children played in the sands and mothers and nurses sat lazily beneath the shade of the summer houses. At the Mansion House ground the bathing seemed to be a trifle later, for there were only about half a dozen in the water and a score of loungers on the sand. The cliff was well covered with spectators, looking on at the fun and frolic in the surf. Two powerful looking men came from the Ocean Hotel bathing houses about a quarter-past eleven o'clock, dressed in black pants and undershirts, and after turning two or three back somersets on the shore and rolling over cartwheel fashion, on arms and legs outstretched like spokes, plunged into the surf and struck out through the waves. There was a rush to see them, for the belief prevailed that they were Johnson, the great English swimmer who attempted the wonderful feat of swimming across the British Channel, and Trautze, an American expert who is matched against the Englishman for the championship of the world. But the men, although powerful swimmers, proved not to be the champions, but a couple of gymnasts, who are at present engaged in an outdoor exhibition of their strength and agility to the visitors at the Branch. One of these men, it was said, intended to swim over the course marked out for Johnson and Trautze, from the Ocean Hotel to the West End and return, at a distance of about a quarter of a mile from the shore. He struck out boldly down the shore, while his companion contented himself with floating, diving, swimming and rolling a short distance beyond the breakers opposite the Ocean House. In the midst of all this sport and frolic a sudden rush was observed at the Mansion House grounds, and a cry was raised and rung along the beach that a man was drowning outside.

A DROWNING MAN CALLING FOR HELP.

Those who were near enough to the Mansion House ropes took in the true state of affairs at once. A bather—evidently a strong man—was struggling helplessly in the strong waves only about thirty or forty feet from the outside stake that holds the rope, and shouting to be saved. The few people who were in the water on the rope seemed to be panic stricken, for instead of attempting to render assistance, they made the best of their way in terror to the shore. One young man, however, struck out for the drowning man, but before he reached him his courage or strength seemed to give way. Either he found the waves too strong for him or he feared to venture within reach of the grasp of the poor creature who was still struggling for life. He turned and made headway for the rope. Another young man had succeeded in reaching the last stake, and as the swimmer who had started on the rescue reached the rope, he seized and helped him ashore in an exhausted condition.

WHO THE VICTIM WAS.

The information soon went forth that the drowning man was Elias Schilling, the leader of the band at the Mansion House, and while people were calling on everybody else to help him, and doing nothing themselves, the poor fellow threw up his hands, and with a cry that was only half uttered, went down and was lost. The next instant the wave rolled in and the breakers broke on the shore as steadily and as indifferently as if they had not swallowed up a human life. Poor Schilling was about twenty-five years of age. His father—an old man of seventy-four years—had just been down to the Branch to see his son, after a separation of some years, and only left this morning. Schilling had been playing with the Mansion House orchestra only half an hour before his death.

JOHNSON TO THE RESCUE.

While the excitement was at its height Johnson and his trainer appeared on the Ocean Hotel steps. Hearing the cry he rushed to the beach and was pointed out the gymnast, who was still struggling with the waves a short distance out, as the man in distress. So confused was the crowd that this man was long supposed by many to be the one who was in need of help. Johnson dashed off his hat, kicked his shoes from his feet, and with all his clothes on plunged into the breakers, dashed over the waves and reached the man to find that he did not need assistance. Before Johnson returned the tragedy higher up the beach had closed. Still Johnson's brave act was none the less meritorious because it was ineffective. The affair has cast a gloom over this part of the Branch to-day and has temporarily interrupted the bathing.

DROWNING AT CONEY ISLAND.

A Policeman and a Young Lady Drowned Yesterday—Inadequate Means of Rescue.

Yesterday afternoon the rush to Coney Island was not so large as usual, yet the beach exhibited to the gaze quite a large number of bathers. In front of the Railroad House about a dozen persons—men, women and children—were in the water. About four o'clock the cry came up from the beach that a man and woman were drowning. The confusion among the hundred or so people in and about the bathing house saloon was, of course, great. Nobody seemed to know what to do. No boat, no lines, no swimmers were to be seen. Two or three men rushed down to the water, stripping off their clothes as though they were going to do something, but nothing was done. In the meantime the man and woman were struggling in the water, having gone down once or twice and come up to the surface. A gentleman who was in the water at the time, and who was himself drawn out by the undertow, but, being an amateur swimmer, saved himself, gives the following particulars:—

"I took a bathing suit about half-past three o'clock and went into the water. Taking the safety line in my hand, I went out to its extreme limit and found the water only up to my waist. About forty feet beyond me I noticed four persons, two men and two women, playfully enjoying themselves in the water. It being then about half-tide, I thought there was no danger in going out further, and swam out to their vicinity. Pretty soon I found I was getting beyond my depth. The rollers were coming in briskly, and I swam toward the beach. Soon I tried to touch the bottom, and found I was still in deep water. I became excited, and found I did not get in as fast as I expected; something dragged me out. I then changed my course eastward, and after a few moments struck the beach and found I could stand, but was completely exhausted. I had stood but a moment when I heard a cry for help. One gentleman and lady had got in upon the sand where they could stand and were appealing for help for the others. I stretched my eye seaward and saw the other two had gone under. My first impulse was to go to their rescue, but, being completely exhausted, I was afraid to risk it. I supposed, too, there must be some facilities on shore for saving drowning people. So I cried to the extreme limit of my voice for a rope or a boat. None came. The people on shore, in the bathing saloon and on the beach seemed paralyzed. I looked seaward again and saw the head of the man appear above water and disappear, and at that moment I noticed a boat putting out from the shore at the bathing house westward of the Railroad House—but it was too late. After a fruitless search of ten or fifteen minutes they gave it up. On making inquiries I found that comparatively no preparations are made at Coney Island (at least so far as the Railroad House is concerned) for the rescue of persons from drowning. Thousands of people resort there for the invigorating influences of salt water bathing, and no precaution is taken for their safety, not even the information that a little to the westward of the safety line of the Railroad House the beach falls off abruptly, and bathers will find themselves beyond their depth before they are aware of it. This fact I have learned from my own experience and risk."

Edward McGrath, a policeman of the Sixth precinct in this city, was the gentleman drowned, and the lady who accompanied him was Miss McGuire, aged about twenty-two years, who has connections in this city, and was said to be a young lady of considerable accomplishment. Mr. McGrath could swim, but lost his life in his efforts to save Miss McGuire.

BURIED ALIVE IN WESTCHESTER.

While some men were working in a marble quarry at Hastings, Westchester county, on Friday afternoon, a heavy embankment of stone and earth suddenly fell in, burying beneath it Patrick Hogan and Thomas Costello, while another of the party, Patrick Devine, had barely time to escape from under the falling mass, a portion of which alighted upon his head and shoulders, inflicting some severe bruises. The task of rescuing the unfortunate men from their living tomb was speedily commenced by their comrades, who soon succeeded in digging out Costello when life was almost extinct. When Hogan was reached it was found that a stone weighing several hundred pounds was lying directly across his body. This having been with difficulty removed it was at once seen that the man was a corpse. An inquest was held on the remains by Coroner Bassett yesterday, and a verdict returned in accordance with the above facts. Costello is not expected to survive, as in addition to his hip being dislocated and his body and limbs being otherwise terribly bruised, he is also injured internally. Hogan leaves a wife and family.

ANOTHER RAILROAD SLAUGHTER.

An Excursion to Death—A Misplaced Switch Again Causes Dreadful Slaughter—Three Men Killed Outright and Ten Others Wounded.

An accident occurred early yesterday morning at Cornwell's, a small station on the Kensington branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad, sixteen miles south of Trenton, which has resulted in the death of three persons and the wounding of ten others. The origin is attributed to a misplaced switch. Shortly after the unfortunate occurrence a rumor prevailed in Trenton that a horrible slaughter of about a dozen people had taken place. A HERALD reporter immediately started for the scene, and succeeded in gathering the full particulars of the calamity.

An excursion train, consisting of thirteen cars, containing a party of about 650 of the members families and friends of the Order of American Mechanics of Norristown, Pa., left Germantown Junction, bound for Long Branch, at eighteen minutes past six o'clock in the morning, and had proceeded as far as Cornwell's station without any mishap. The train sped by this place at the rate of thirty miles an hour on the north-bound track, without any apparent danger ahead, until it arrived at the switch which lies about 100 yards from the station, when suddenly its course was changed to the other track, on which lay a heavily laden coal train of thirty-five cars.

A TERRIFIC CRASH.

A fearful jam and a frightful collision was then the result. In a few seconds an appalling spectacle presented itself. Two passenger cars and three coal cars were shivered to atoms, and strewn among the wreck were to be seen men, women and children struggling to extricate themselves. Wedged between the débris lay three stalwart men in the agonies of death, who a few moments before were full of health and vigor. The wildest excitement reigned for the time being. Crowds flocked to the scene of horror and death, and efforts were made to rescue the ill-fated victims. The lifeless bodies of the three unfortunates already alluded to were after much trouble extricated. The wounded in the meantime, who were all men, were conveyed to the station to await medical treatment, which had been telegraphed for. The escape of the women and children is considered

MIRACULOUS.

Not one of them was hurt. The locomotive of the excursion train was but slightly damaged, and, beyond the wrecking of the cars already described and the obstruction to the track for about eight hours, no further damage was done to the property of the company.

The conductor of the coal train, George Mount, made the following statement:—"When we arrived at Cornwell's we stopped to take on five empty cars. I told the engineer before we arrived not to blow for the switches as freight trains were late the day before, and I did not know whether they had all gone up or not. When we stopped the switches were all right to go across. The locomotive then went across to the side track, leaving the train behind. The operator then came and told me that an excursion train was coming from Holmesburg. He and I then went and looked at the switches and hallooed to the switch tender to set them all right. Apparently the switch tender did so. Shortly afterwards the trains struck."

THE SWITCH TENDER'S STORY.

Charles Thorn, a man of about sixty summers, gave his explanation of the sad affair in tremulous tones. He said:—"I came down and turned the switch to let the engine go in after some empty cars. I had the switches set to make a "flying drill" after the engine was to run over on the north bound track. I was to throw the "warding" switch over on to the main track, so as the empty cars could go on to the down track. The conductor of the coal train came running out and said there was an extra coming up. I shifted the single rail track all right, and in the excitement I shifted that instead of letting it alone. If I had let it remain as it was the train would have gone by all right. I have been in the employment of the company eighteen years in charge of this depot and switches, and never had an accident before. I had no knowledge of the extra train coming till the conductor of the coal train hallooed to me. When he did so the train was within a quarter of a mile of the switch. I think I would have had time to reset the switch after I knew the train was coming if I had known it was wrong. The excitement bewildered me."

Several of the wounded men made statements also, descriptive of what they saw immediately before the collision, and the effect it had on them.

Coroner J. W. Clossen, of Bristol, empanelled a jury, and, after viewing the bodies and making a preliminary examination of some of the principal witnesses, adjourned the inquest to to-morrow morning, at eleven o'clock.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded:—

KILLED.

Alexander Schall, aged forty years, Norristown, Pa.

Hedley Cox, aged twenty-five years, Norristown, Pa.

Sidney Nagle, aged twenty-eight years, Plymouth, Pa.

WOUNDED.

Charles Detterer, Norristown, right leg injured.

William Grubb, Collegeville, Montgomery county, Pa., contusion on right side of head and hurt on left leg and shoulder.

William Carr, Plymouth, left wrist broken, left leg and knee bruised, and gashes in head and forehead.

Harvey Godschalk, Greatesford, Montgomery county, head and face injured.

Abraham Moyer, Greatesford, slightly hurt.

West Beyer, John Bile, Joseph Fitzgerald, George Wilson, engineer of the excursion train, and Frank Harveston, fireman of the same, were all slightly injured.

One of the wounded men, Charles Detterer, said that but for the prompt application of the brakes in stopping the excursion train the slaughter would have been greater.

The excursion train proceeded on its way to Long Branch as soon as another engine was provided.

The inference to be drawn from the statements given is that the switchman had the switches turned all right when the engine of the freight train passed in on the side track, and that while in a state of absent mindedness he again turned the switch when the excursion train was seen approaching, and thus opened the way for a collision with the freight train.

CHARITIES AND CORRECTION.

Statement of the Departmental Census and Cost Per Capita—Comparative Salaries of Departments—Report of Commissioner Stern.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction, held yesterday, the following highly important and carefully compiled document was presented by Commissioner Myer Stern, which was, on motion, unanimously accepted, ordered to be spread on the minutes in full and laid on the table for further action:—

NEW YORK, August 15, 1874.

TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF PUBLIC CHARITIES AND CORRECTION:—

GENTLEMEN—The various city departments are called upon to make up and submit to the Board of Apportionment an estimate of the expenses for the fiscal year to come, in order to receive the necessary apportionment of funds. I need not call your attention to the trouble and difficulties created recently in this department by the reduction of the amount which we asked for in our last estimate. We pleaded in vain before the gentlemen of that august body knew better our needs and requirements, and we had to submit to the inevitable with as good grace as possible. The principles of economy and retrenchment which the Board of Apportionment introduced with such forcible energy had to be accepted and we had to shift the best way we could. Economy, however, is not always practised best by reducing the amount of expenditure. It rather consists in a careful examination of the sums actually required for the proper maintenance of a private or public household and their proper application, guarding against but also against decay and decline. The landlord who allows the rain to leak through the roof of his house, the walls to crack and blacken, the pipes to rot, because he dreads the expenditure of money required for the necessary repair, is indeed a poor economist; he pays in the end double and treble the price laid out by his intelligent, but in his eyes, too liberal neighbor, who at once sends for the proper mechanic whenever his attention is called to some existing defect.

THE STERN TRIBUNAL OF APPORTIONMENT.

It is true we carry on the department with

but are we in doing so practising real economy, or are we short-sighted economists who do not understand the real necessity of the department which we are charged to administrate? Will the economy which we are compelled to practise prove in the end to have been a real saving or extravagance and waste? It seems to me a duty which we owe to ourselves and to the people to examine carefully the household under our charge and see what its real needs are—what the costs of its administration are in proportion to the number of people who are enjoying its benefits. In giving a proper account we become relieved, to a great extent, of the responsibility that rests upon our shoulders. If the economy practised is but a poor shadow—a substitute, well put upon the stage, glittering in the distance, but we at least are not responsible for the suffering that must ensue, the decline and decay that must subsequently follow. I have, with this view, examined the records of our department, of which the accompanying statistical tables are a faithful extract. We have something like twenty-five correctionary and eleemosynary institutions under our charge, of which the latter constitute the large majority. Of the 9,799 persons that we had under our charge in the month of July 2,725 were inmates of the correctionary institutions, a little more than one-fourth of the whole number; the balance, 7,074, or nearly three-fourths of the entire number, were the wards of charity, inmates of the various hospitals, the Lunatic, Insane and Blind Asylums, the Almshouse and the Soldiers' Retreat and the various institutions of a similar character.

Whether the support and maintenance of this large population is conducted on the

is best ascertained from the statement which shows the average cost per head within the various institutions. The minimum cost is reached in the Almshouse with but 13 cents 6 mills per capita, the maximum, that of the Smallpox Hospital, being $1, 14 cents and 7 mills per head, giving an average of cost to us, per capita, of 29½ cents per day of every man, woman and child under our charge. Besides this army of voluntary and revolutionary dependents upon our bounty a large number of sick, destitute and helpless people look to us for advice, counsel and relief; the family where husband and father is out of work, or disabled by sickness from procuring raiment and food, the widowed mother and the deserted wife, the betrayed girl and the destitute stranger. Who will say that with such an exhibit we are wanting in the application of the principles of true economy? It is not, however, the supply alone which calls for the exercise of economy, the machinery requisite for the successful government and supervision of the various departments under our charge, requires great care and foresight. Not a person should be employed whose services could be dispensed with, and not a dollar more should be paid than is absolutely necessary to obtain the services we need. We must keep in sight the fact that some of our institutions require the

in fact some positions at our disposal ought to be filled only by men of the highest scientific accomplishments, and in filling these the question ought never to be, how large a remuneration ought to be commensurate to the demands made, in order to secure the best skill and talent to our institutions. Our hospitals, lunatic and other asylums ought not to be looked upon as a mere shelter for the unfortunate sufferers. They are more; they are the best schools which the country affords for the study of the abnormal and phenomenal conditions to which the human body and mind is subject. No institutions of the kind can offer such a large and varied field for and mind throughout the various phases of disease, and of necessity they should be presided over by men who combine practical knowledge with the highest accomplishments of the scholar, men combining the qualifications of administrators and teachers. Our hospitals and asylums offer opportunities that ought to draw to the medical colleges of the city of New York students from the whole country. I am sure that neither the city nor the Commissioners of the department will lose sight of these considerations, which are too great to be measured by the scale of a few thousand dollars by which the annual budget would be increased.

THE REDUCTION MADE BY THE BOARD OF APPORTIONMENT compelled us to reduce also the compensation of some of those men; in my opinion this practice of economy is rather an inversion of the true principle. At present the average sum paid by this department for services rendered is $460 per annum; certainly an exhibit that can not be compared with by any public department throughout the whole country. However, if we might succeed in keeping up the various departments under our charge at the present rate, it will be all that can be done: we have no means to make the necessary repairs to keep the various buildings and grounds in such condition as they ought to be kept; neither will we be able to make such improvements as are suggested by the experience we have collected. Some of these

IMPROVEMENTS OUGHT NOT TO BE DELAYED ANY LONGER.

Let me refer here to one of them. The prison discipline as at present practised is far from having the beneficial effect which it ought to have. This is no fault of the officers, but of the system. As long as we are compelled to mix up indiscriminately the hardened criminal with the novice, the convict who is sent to the Penitentiary for a comparatively slight offence with the outlaw who has lost all sense of moral conception, we shall fail to make the institution reformatory or correctional: it will be rather the nursery for criminal education. Added to this the want of means to establish shops where the convicts could be properly and usefully employed adds no little to confirming the bad feature, which is a peculiarity of the institution on the island, in common with other institutions of this kind.

I have always held that the object of society is not alone to punish the criminal, to make the violation of a law, odious, but also to reform those that have become the victims of bad habits, temptation or criminal disposition. If we cannot reform the character of those that are consigned to penal establishments we must give up all hope of ever improving their condition, of restoring them to society as useful members thereof. It were better then for them and for society to seclude them forever, instead of letting them loose again, as so many birds of prey that sooner or later will have to be returned to the cage.

In order to reform them, to correct them, we must teach them the benefits and the beauty of a life of

we must endeavor to kindle in them the spark of moral consciousness, and this cannot be done without putting them to useful employment and holding out some encouragement for industry and good behavior. The present way of employment is more like a substitute for it. The convicts are put to work merely to fill out their time. Their labor can hardly be called productive, nor of a kind to give satisfaction to the State or to themselves. A proper division of criminals, according to the

which they may have been guilty of, cannot well be effected without the ability to employ the convicts at various useful occupations, nor can we hope to exercise a reformatory influence on them and discharge them as better persons without teaching them a trade or giving them such employment as will not degrade them further, but rather lift them up from the mire in which they have been wallowing.

I cannot doubt that, with a knowledge of the real condition of this department, the money required for its proper administration will be provided by the Board of Apportionment. The administration of charities is certainly the last place which the people of New York wish to be stinted from a desire of practising a false economy, which, in reality, will prove the contrary.

Annexed please find the tables of the average amounts paid per annum, in each of the city departments, for employés, before the revised estimates and since; also the cost per capita of the inmates of the different institutions already referred to in this communication, all of which is respectfully submitted.

MAN OVERBOARD AND LOST.

The steamer G. T. Oliphant, having on board an excursion party bound for Iona Island, touched at Sing Sing yesterday forenoon to take on some additional pleasure seekers, and having accomplished this proceeded on her way up the river with the barge James R. Baldwin. Before she had gone very far from the dock a man, said to have been a deck hand on the steamer, while attempting to get on board the barge fell overboard and at once disappeared. The steamer was promptly stopped and a boat lowered; but as nothing could be seen of the ill-fated man, it was believed that he had been struck by the wheel a moment after he fell into the water. The name of the deceased did not transpire.

EXPLOSION OF A LOCOMOTIVE.

A Man's Leg Blown Off at the Depot in Hoboken.

Yesterday afternoon at half-past three o'clock an explosion occurred at the Delaware and Lackawanna depot in Hoboken, by which a brakeman named William Connors had one leg almost entirely blown away and the other terribly mutilated. A locomotive attached to a drill train was pushing a large number of cars up an incline when the cylinder head was blown out and Conners was hurled off the car, on which he was standing, a distance of twelve or fourteen feet. The unfortunate man was conveyed to St. Francis' Hospital, Jersey City, where he lies in a precarious condition. The physicians have no hope of his recovery.

MARINE COURT—PART 1.

A Caution to Proprietors of Dining Saloons.

Before Judge McAdam.

Dinustaded vs. Kilian.—The defendant keeps a dining saloon in William street; the plaintiff is a dealer in calfskins, doing business in Frankfort street. The plaintiff alleges that on the 9th of last month he went to the defendant's saloon for the purpose of getting his dinner. There being no vacant seat he was standing by the stove, when the defendant came up and asked what he wanted. He replied "Dinner," whereupon the defendant called him a drunken vagabond, and put him out of the saloon. The defendant says he saw the plaintiff standing by the stove for some time, where he was very much in the way of the waiters, and, as his clothes were ragged, and never having seen him before, he took him to be a beggar. He stepped up to him and asked what he wanted, and, receiving no reply, told him to go out, which the plaintiff refused to do, and he then pushed him out of the saloon. Afterwards, when he ascertained that he was a man of respectability and means, he sent word to him that he was sorry for what he had done, and was ready to apologize for it. The plaintiff, however, refused to accept any apology, but brought this suit to recover $1,000.

The Court charged the jury that a person entering a restaurant for refreshments, and having the means to pay for them, is lawfully entitled to remain there until supplied, and that the proprietor has no right to eject a person who is not disorderly merely because his clothing is rough, and if they believed the plaintiff's story he was entitled to recover. The jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $300.

A BRAKEMAN SERIOUSLY INJURED.

BOSTON, Mass., August 15, 1874.

Samuel Gilbridge, brakeman on the Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad, was terribly and probably fatally injured by the giving way of the brake rod chain, throwing him from and partially under the train.

DELIBERATE MURDER OF A NEGRO.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., August 15, 1874.

Robert Banks, colored, while standing in front of a saloon at Kingston Springs, Tenn., this evening, was approached by William Killam, white, on horseback, who asked him if he wanted to shoot with him. Banks replied, "No, sir." Killam replied, "Then I will shoot with you," and immediately shot Banks in the abdomen, producing a fatal wound. Killam, who was intoxicated, fled to the woods.

Maritime Miscellany.

SHIP WARRIOR QUEEN, which went ashore at Point Reyes, California, is well up on the beach, and at low tide people can get aboard of her from shore without getting in the water. The wrecking party who are stripping her will get a handsome return for their labor.

BARK BESSIE ROGERS—The chains have been placed underneath this vessel, sunk in Newport outer harbor, and the wreckers are endeavoring to sink the pontoons preparatory to raising her. It is believed that it will not be necessary to unload any more of her cargo.

SCHR CHOWAN, wrecked off Kennebunk, Me, was valued at $2,500. Part of the rigging and materials will be saved.

HALIFAX, Aug 15—The Judge of Vice Admiralty gave a decision to-day in the case of the American bark Chas Fobes, brought here last spring by American fishermen belonging to the schrs Montana, Margaret, and Veteran. The total amount of salvage awarded is $2,840.

Bark Pohono, of Machias, Me, which went ashore at Cow Bay a year ago, has been floated off and towed to North Sydney.

Brig Spray Bloom, of Arichat, from Providence, arrived at North Sydney on the 12th, leaking between 5000 and 6000 strokes an hour, having struck three times off the eastern end of Scatary.

Bark Forest Princess (Br), at North Sydney, reports:—Aug 1, lat 49 52, lon 46 50, fell in with two large icebergs—one about 250 feet high, and a ledged frill of fully half a mile running underneath, over which the sea broke with great fury.

KENNEBUNKPORT, Me, Aug 13—This morning at an early hour the fishing schr Gleam, of Provincetown, Capt Rogers, went ashore on Gillespie's Point near the Beach House, and has bilged. She may come off.

THE LOST BARK SCOTLAND—The United States Consul at Swatow reports to the State Department, under date of June 10, that on April 11, he learned that some Chinese fishermen had stated that the masts of a recently sunken vessel was visible off the Island of Namoah, and that it was supposed that every one on board were lost. The American bark Scotland, which had left Shanghae for Swatow, was many days overdue, and as it seemed probable that this was the wreck of that vessel, the Consul applied to the Chinese Admiral for information. The Admiral replied that there had been a storm on March 21, in which 100 native boats and 300 lives were lost, but he had heard nothing of a foreign wreck. Inquiry was made of the Consul General, Mr. Seward, who reported that the American bark Scotland, of San Francisco, Glidden, master, 441 tons, built at Richmond, in 1849, and owned by Plummer, cleared at Shanghae, March 14, for Swatow. On May 29, the Consul received a letter from the Commissioner of Customs for Swatow, stating that on the 25th he found, by sending an officer to the wreck, that she is bark rigged. Her foretopmast seemed to be quite a new spar. The yards were bright. The foot of the foretopgallantmast is painted white, and the spider band around the foretopmast is red. The Consul adds that if the parts described correspond with the Scotland it is probable that that vessel was wrecked on Boat Rock about the 30th of March, and that the whole of the crew perished. James Murray shipped on the Scotland as second officer. Of the rest of the crew, excepting the master, the Consul knew nothing.

The unknown schr before reported ashore at Kennebunkport, Me, near the wreck of schr Chowan, was got off at high water. She was lumber loaded.
